Bike cops love it — more pay, easier conditions

Practice prevents falls

California Highway Patrol motorcycle officers from the Golden Gate Division were using the Fairgrounds parking lot as a practice ground yesterday.

Sixteen officers, all veterans though some were new to motorcycle duty, went through a variety of drills including high speed braking, figure eights, slalom courses and a difficult combined slalom and "S" turn the rider must approach at high speed then brake to enter.

Sgt. Ed Campbell, a former motorcycle patrolman (few sergeants ride), said the officers were required to practice this way four times a year but added most officers had personal bikes and got more experience than simply working and drilling.

He said most officers on motorcycle duty wait five years or more for the assignment and get 80 hours of academy training then 30 days of supervised "break-in" training before becoming full bike patrolmen.

It was the second day of motorcycle duty for Officer Bill Hughes, a six-year CHP veteran. Hughes said he had owned motorcycles for several years and added he had wanted motorcycle duty "since day one but I had to wait for it."

His supervisor for the 30 day breaking-in was Len Vanderburg, a 12-year bike veteran and "one of the best," according to Campbell. Bike patrolmen, Vanderburg said, preferred it to any other duty.

"They love bikes, it makes the job easier and you get additional skill pay," he said.

Vanderburg and Campbell discounted the danger of falling on motorcycle patrol. Both men said they had fallen on duty but added that falls were actually rare. Vanderburg said he fallen once, when hit by a car making a slow illegal turn. Campbell said his only fall came just before his promotion to sergeant after nine years of motorcycle duty.

"Preventing falls," he said, "is mainly practice."

Water ruling's historic impact on cities

LIVERMORE — Zone 7 has agreed to consider Chester Anderson's application for a private sewage disposal system on a 57-acre parcel of land he owns located on Portola Avenue.

Anderson is the first person to ask the flood control and water conservation district to oversee operation of a private sewage system, and the outcome is considered by many to be a precedent - setting decision.

If the zone agrees to supervise the treatment operation, critics of the proposal charge that annexations of unincorporated land would cease almost entirely. Landowners would be able to develop their land without first having to annex to a city, thus eliminating sewage connection fees and city taxes.

Zone 7 directors, once they had agreed to supervise one such system, they could not refuse another similar request because of the precedent established, opponents argue.

Proponents of the measure claim it would allow land to develop when it could not otherwise. Due to discharge problems and a lack of available treatment capacity, Livermore has not been able to issue a new sewer connection permit for several months.

Were the Zone 7 board to allow Anderson's private sewage disposal system, he and other potential developers would not have to wait for Livermore to expand its treatment capacity by one million gallons per day, expected to be in operation by 1978-79, before beginning construction.

Livermore Mayor Helen Tirsell argued strongly against Zone 7 intervention in what the city considers a planning matter. The Zone 7 board would be in directly planning urbanized development just outside Livermore's borders, she argued, having impacts on th city while allowing it no voice in the planning process.

Anderson said he was willing to go before the city for a decision on approving the proposed development, a 300-unit partment complex. "For 15 years I have been trying to do black and white business with them (Livermore)," Anderson said Wednesday. "They have a bad track

"A grape a day keeps the doctor away," according to the State Farm Bureau, and so does wine, raisins and grape juice.

Local vintners agree — with gusto.

"Canadian researchers claim grapes fight viruses," says the bureau, especially grapes and juice. They're loaded with tannic acid and phenols that heve "some anti-germ qualities."

"I hadn't heard that particular information before," says Stony Ridge Winery's Harry Rosingana, "but there's been a lot of writings along those lines."

A half-liter provides 40 per cent of a person's minimum daily iron requirement, he adds, quoting from an article by famed U.C. Davis enologist Dr. Maynard Amerine.

"There's no question but that a glass of wine with dinner is good for you," says Eric Wente of Wente Bros. Winery in Livermore.

"A fifth a day keeps the doctor away," quips Rosingana, who claims that as his usual intake.

"Some days a little more; some days a little less."

According to Dr. Amerine's article in "Wines and Vines," wine can supply "a substantial amount of the body's energy requirement and may be a carbohydrate replacement."

That may explain why "winos," the bain of big city boweries, often live long lives. The wine substitutes for fatty carbohydrates; they have not "pickled" their organs.

Wine's high potassium and low sodium also enhance its physiological qualities, according to Dr. Amerine. And its high amino acids help in digestion.

"That's why they sometimes give it to people in geriatric wards," offers Rosingana.

Dr. Amerine also says wine has "at least 10 vitamins in significant amounts," especially those of the "B" family, including thiamine and riboflavin.

And it can provide more than half the 20 "growth factors necessary to human well being."

Villa Armando's Walt Wood concurs. Heartily.

"Zinfandel seems to be the leader," Wood says in pulling from his copious readings on the subject.

Historic cars

He'll race a classic

Pleasanton's Dean Watts will be the lone valley entrant in the Fourth Annual Monterey Historic Automobile races Saturday at Laguna Seca Raceway.

Watts will drive his 1959 Porsche Carrera Speedster in the event, which is divided into eight classes. Entries range from a 1914 Ford 'T' Speedster to a 1974 Ferrari 308 GT/LM.

To earn the designation "historic" a car must have made a significant advancement in automotive technology.

They'll show off art

Area artists Al Wisgardie and Bob Rice will be exhibiting their works Saturday and Sunday, Aug. 27 and 28 at Village Realty, 1813 Fourth St., Livermore.

The two-man show, which will be held from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m., will feature oils and watercolors.

Wisgardie, a resident of Livermore, has exhibited in juried shows in Northern California, and is past president of the Lawrence Livermore Lab Art Association, which he founded.

Rice, also a Livermore resident, has won first prize at the Merced County fair for his works.

Fiedler joins Pops

Arthur Fiedler, returning to the Bay Area for his annual Pops concerts, will take the stage with Pearl Bailey for a Friday, Aug. 26 concert at Concord Pavilion.

The 8 p.m. show will feature Bailey in renditions of "Caberet," "The Way We Were" and "Hello Dolly," as well as classical numbers conducted by the "King of Pops," Fiedler.

Strike hampers commuters

OAKLAND — As the Bay Area Rapid Transit police strike enters its second day, more officers are working than not — but support by other unions hampered BART operations and delayed commuters Thursday.

Trains will be running on a limited basis today as they did Thursday.

Locally, AC Transit reported an unofficial 50 per cent drop in feeder bus service to BART stations as commuters apparently took to cars.

Heads had not yet been counted, but a spokesman said drivers reported a marked fall in ridership the first day of the strike.

But the intensified bus schedule — especially on transbay lines — will not mean a drop in Valley feeder buses, AC said. The district's contracts with both BART and the drivers' union guarantee the scheduled runs.

"We aren't going to cut back our runs because of a three day, or five day, or whatever strike," an official said. "We're bound by our contract to run at a certain level."

As of late Thursday, only 37 members of the 98-member BART Police Officers' Association continued to walk the picket lines, said BART General Manager Frank Herringer.

And by day's end Thursday, police union president Eugene Jennings had been ordered into court to answer contempt charges. Jennings did not dispute Herringer's figures.

Jennings must appear Tuesday before Alameda County Superior Court Judge William Hayes to tell why he shouldn't be found in contempt of a ruling by Hayes that the strike is illegal.

While the police union members' support for the strike waned, 95 per cent of the BART employes belonging to Amalgamated Transit Union Local 1555 and United Public Employes' Union Local 390 walked off their jobs in support of the police.

The union president contended that the strike has now snowballed into a fight for survival of public employes' right to go on strike.

He said that police officers, threatened with loss of their jobs Thursday morning, "went belly-up" and returned to work.

Indeed, Herringer declared that any police officers who aren't back on the job today will face "disciplinary action or termination" in addition to possible contempt of court charges.

Jennings said the police officers who are on the picket lines now will stay there. They are the backbone of the strike, he said.

Don't build in fire area like Diablo

MARTINEZ — The state Department of Forestry has asked Contra Costa and other California counties to revise zoning laws that would "minimize or prevent the building of new homes in areas of critical fire danger."

The department's request was apparently sparked by the recent rash of wilderness fires at Mt. Diablo, Santa Barbara and Corona, all of which destroyed and threatened residential homes.

Rodeo

Heroes to fill a pantheon

Ridin' broncs, ropin' and bulldoggin' steers were some of the things Valley ranchers did for fun twenty-five years ago when this area was open range.

Out of this pastime the rodeo was born. Rancher, Harry Rowell put in an arena at his Dublin Canyon ranch and brought the rodeo as we know it today to the Valley. He later became well-known in national rodeo circuits for providing rodeo stock.

The still existing Hayward Rodeo was moved to the Rowell Ranch "around" 1927, according to Cecil Jones. Jones used to work for Rowell and still maintains a small ranch in the Tassajara area.

Because of the area's wild west heritage, a rodeo hall of fame will be opened at the Dublin Heritage Center in October, featuring priceless western artifacts from the Rowell collection, among others.

Rowell's rodeo creed stated, "Give them a thrilling, spectacular show — AND MAKE IT FAST."

Evidently, cowboys participating in Rowell's rodeos took the creed to heart since many turned out to be world champions.

"If you went back through the entry books at the ranch, you'd find nearly every world champion has competed at Rowell Ranch," Jones noted.

Slim Pickens of movie fame made his start in the 1940's at the Rowell arena, Jones said.

Other well-known names in rodeo circuits are Perry Ivory, Buster Ivory, Bill Ward and Ted Ashworth. In 1958, Ashworth won the World Champion Team Roping event.

City silent, CARD starts new drive

PLEASANTON — City attorney Ken Scheidig has "no reaction" to the CARD committee's new initiative drive.

CARD officials this week announced their second petition drive aimed at putting the controversial "super sewer" pipeline on the ballot. They gathered enough signatures in their first attempt. But city council, under Scheidig's recommenation, ruled the issue not subject to a referendum.

Scheidig said he will withhold comment until he sees the petition.

This one will be aimed at a pair of March 29 city council resolutions modifying the Livermore - Amador Valley Water Management Agency's (LAVWMA) joint powers agreement. The changes give LAVWMA the power to skip an election and build the export pipeline with bonds.

CARD says it will start to solicit signatures next week. The committee will need 10 per cent of the city's registered voters.

Scheidig told city council the original initiative was aimed at a later "administrative action" by the council, and hence not subject to the referendum process.

Only "legislative action" can face an initiative, he said, suggesting the March 29 decisions might fit the bill.

"If we're successful, then the ball's in their court," said Kidder. With enough signatures, he says city council, based on Scheidig's earlier recommendation, must accept the petition.

That means either dropping the controversial amendments or putting the bond issue before voters, who last year turned it down.

CARD has not yet made a decision on challenging city council's earlier ruling that claimed the issue "administrative action" not subject to a referendum. But it's still "an option," Kidder said.

CARD will have six months to collect enough signatures on their new petition.

Meanwhile, LAVWMA must have its plans before the state by Sept. 30 to gain approval, and, eventually, up to 87.5 per cent federal and state funding for the treated sewage line.

Scheidig also told council a delay caused by again putting the issue before voters would jeopardize outside funding, and expose the city to suits by fellow LAVWMA members Livermore and Valley Community Services District.

record with me."

Zone 7 Chairman Gib Marguth said the board should thoroughly consider Anderson's request. Failure to do so might mean the board of supervisors would take over the approval process, and Zone 7 would lose its say completely.

A motion by Director Richard Ryon to rfer th application to the City of Livermore failed 3-4, with directors Marguth, George Lydiksen, Joseph Concannon and Edward Kinney voting it down.

A move directing staff to gather information on the application and report back with recommendations passed unanimously.

Local small post offices safe

The federal government has lifted its moratorium on closing tiny post offices, but Sunol and San Ramon, the only smaller local post offices that could be affected by closings, are in no danger.

An information officer from the regional postal headquarters in San Bruno told The Times that there are no plans to eliminate any small post offices in the Bay Area.

Likely to be affected in other parts of the United States are tiny post offices only a couple miles removed from other post offices. There one would be chosen over the other and rural routes run solely out of the survivor.

The federal government has established a procedure for public input on whether a post office should be closed. The federal register will announce the government's desire to close the facility and there will be a time for written public response.

The notion of closing small rural post offices was announced more than a year ago and met with such stormy reaction from small town postmasters and community leaders that a year's moratorium was declared while the new public input procedure was established.

"People in rural America are worried that if they lose the post office, they also will lose community identity," said Deputy Postmaster General William Bolger to the Associated Press. "The believe it is like being taken off the map."

However, the new rules indicate that even if a town loses its post office, its name will be retained in the Directory of Post Offices, a volume used as a reference book on the names of towns. Residents of the towns also could continue to use their town names as their addresses, although they would pick up their mail at another post office.

'Hopyard site best for center'

Vacant land along Hopyard Road is the best location for an East County Government Center, city council has decided to tell Alameda County Supervisors. The city's recommendation will compete with Livermore City Council's push for use of land at the current Santa Rita jail north of I-580.

County supervisors are slated to consder alternate sites at their Aug. 30 meeting. They postponed discussion earlier this month pending input from Valley's communities.

Pleasanton's decision reverses its two-year-old stand in favor of a hill site overlooking Sunol Boulevard. J Neighboring Mission Park residents asked council to nix the two Sunol Boulevard sites on grounds either one would hurt their tract.

Council agreed, adding a downtown site would further congest the city's Main Street.

In team roping, two men make the run. One ropes the steer's head, the other the heels, Jones explained.

"Then there were the Schneider brothers from Livermore," Jones mentioned. "Johnny was World Champion Bull Rider in 1929, 1930 and 1932; Frankie took the same honor in 1933 and 1934. In 1935 Frankie was named World Champion Bareback Rider and in 1931, Johnny was All-Around World's Champion Cowboy.

Vern Castro of Livermore was named World Champion Team Roper in 1942. In 1943, Vern, his brother Vic, and Leonard Block tied for the Worldt Champion Team Roping. Block was also from Livermore.

The famous rodeo clown, Wilber Palugher, got his start at the Rowell Ranch in the 1940's.

"He started out as a contestant but later went into doing the clown routine," Jones explained.

Rodeo clowns draw charging, kicking animals away from cowboys who have been thrown to the ground by attracting the animal's attention.

Pete Knight was killed at the Rowell arena in 1937 or 1938, Jones said. After being thrown from a saddle bronc, the horse stepped on him. Knight was World Champion Bronc Rider in 1932, 1933, 1935 and 1936.

Larry Mahan, "out of Oregon," won more all-around world championships than anybody.

"He won in 1966, 1967, 1968, 1969, 1970 and 1973," Jones reported.

Jones admitted he "had done some rodeoin'" from the 1930's to 1947. He is still a member of the Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association. He has also worked with San Francisco Cow Palace staff for 30 years. His title now is Rodeo Coordinator.

Jones was also part of the American team that won the All-Around Championship for Bronc and Bull Riding during the 1940 Royal Easter Show in Sydney, Australia. He said he had also "won a few other prizes."

Zone staff splits from Hayward

LIVERMORE — Zone 7, the Valley's fresh water wholesaler, Wednesday started in motion the machinery to separate its staff from the other nine district staff employes operating in Hayward.

The only one of 10 county water conservation and flood control districts with an elected board, Zone 7 hopes to gain more control over its future direction by creating an independent staff.

Employe duties between the 10 zone staffs often overlap. Zone 7 directors want their staff to work solely on Valley matters, and talked about eventually moving the staff to a Valley location.

After years of wrangling on proposals to reorganize the district staff, Zone 7 directors voted unanimously to officially notify the county board of supervisors of their decision to sever county ties with Zone 7 employes.

A legal firm is being sought to advise the zone board on legal steps towards the proposed transfer. Plans to advertise for a full-time general manager are being investigated. The zone staff was directed to prepare data on how the transfer could be completed soon with the least amount of problems.

The switch would mean that Zone 7 staff would no longer be county employes. A representative from the county personnel office said he knew of no way to give Zone 7 directors full control of the staff without breaking off from the county.

The proposed changes will be further discussed at a special meeting of the Zone 7 board Sept. 14.

Trustees eye new facilities

LIVERMORE — School board trustees, Livermore city council members and civic leaders are scheduled to tour the Livermore Valley Joint Unified School District's new facilities tomorrow morning.

The district this week announced completion of the $10 million lease and purchase building program it started in 1975. Superintendent Leo Croce will lead an inspection of the district's five new elementary school core buildings, including the still unnamed Sunet East school, Livermore High School's new classrooms, library and improved gym facilities; Granada High School's new student union and the district's new transportation and warehousing facilities.

The program was financed by voter approval of extension of the tax revenue limit for building leases and purchases in March, 1975. Croce said this week he expected all the facilities to be ready for the opening of school Sept. 7.

Scheduled stops on the facilities' tour Saturday morning are Christensen School's new core building, 5757 Haggin Oaks Ave; Arroyo Seco School, 5280 Irene Way; East Avenue Intermediate School, 3951 East Ave.; Livermore High School, 600 Maple St.; Junction School's new shop department, music and art buildings, 298 Junction Ave.; the district's transportation facility on Ladd Avenue; the unnamed Sunset East II school; Arroyo Mocho School, 1040 Lawrence Rd.; Granada High School, 400 Wall St.; the Rancho Las Positas new elementary core building, 401 Las Positas Rd. and the new district warehouse, 685 Las Positas Rd.

"There's no doubt about wine's health benefits. I have about a fifth or half-liter a day, and I haven't had any complaints. I stopped ordering cocktails, even in gourmet restaurants. Now I'll have some wine instead. Liquor kills your tastebuds."

Dr. Amerine wrote France's Minister of Wine to suggest, "Wine's greatest contribution may be intangible. We need wine for psychic reasons as much as for nutrition."

Utility asked on reusing wastewater

BY KELLY GUST
Times Staff Writer

OAKLAND — Why is drinking water being poured down the drain when recycled water can be put to use in construction?

That's what Jane Laidley of Orinda wanted to know Tuesday at a special public hearing before the East Bay Municipal Utility District board of directors.

"We've been led to believe there's a water shortage, then why not put recycled wastewater to its best use?" she asked.

The district board set up the special meeting Tuesday to discuss the success of the current water rationing program, but at times the meeting turned into a condemnation of the board for not pushing the use of recycled water.

Laidley claimed that Rich Hacker, an Orinda realtor, was using an average of 26,000 gallons of water per day to wet down the soil as he builds a single-family home on Sunnyside Lane near Bear Creek Road.

She and other residents have been keeping tabs on the water meter at the site.

"That's sufficient (26,000 gallons) to provoke our concern when we're (the established residents) struggling along on 225 gallons a day (the current district ration)," she said.

"We think 26,000 gallons a day is excessive when reclaimed water can be used."

But according to EBMUD, Hacker's use of water is legal. According to district spokesmen, there is no real limit to the amount of water used for compacting soil on building sites, and thousands of gallons are used on sites each day all over the East Bay.

EBMUD Director Helen Burke agreed with Laidley, however, and tried to push through a resolution making a requirement that all developers use some reclaimed wastewater.

Earlier this summer EBMUD took over leadership of an East Bay project to urge the use of reclaimed wastewater in compacting soil, highway landscapiqg and sewer flushing.

So far, the district hasn't had any applications for use of the water.

"I think it's a paper program and I think this board needs to take leadership in pushing the use," Burke said.

John Boomer, of the San Pablo Sanitary District, told the board that his district has 700,000 gallons of reclaimed water each day that could be used.

"Everyday we're pumping 700,000 gallons in the Bay because somebody can't get off their duffs to figure out how to use it," he told the board. "I think a part of the board is sitting on its duffs."

"You can't let the contractors go using 20,000 gallons a day to put roads down when other water is available," he said.

"It's going to cost developers a lot to use reclaimed water," Board President Ted Hitchcock told him, but agreed that maybe the board "should put the pressure on" to use reclaimed water and save drinking water.

But, Hitchcock added that he wanted withhold action until the board could hear the developers' side of the question.

How reclaimed wastewater can best be put to use, and how to control the amount of water used on construction sites, will be discussed at a special board meeting Tuesday at 10 a.m. at district headquarters, 2130 Adeline St.

The meeting will also cover discussion of the 1977-78 tax rate.

Author's Valley

By BARBARA COHEN
Times Staff Writer

ALAMO — Did you know that the classic movie, "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," was not really filmed in Danville, as always assumed? Or that the famous Danville hotel is actually 24 years younger than records show?

Well, these historical scoops plus everything you've always wanted to know and then some about the San Ramon Valley can be found in a soon to be published book by Alamo author Virgie Jones.

Entitled "Historical Persons and Places ... In San Ramon Valley," the book is an update of Jones' first historical undertaking, "Remembering Alamo," but includes all of the San Ramon Valley — from Alamo to the Alameda County line — as we know it today.

The book traces the San Ramon Valley from the 1600s to "the last minute," explained Jones, an Alamo resident since 1948.

And the last minute is exactly what she means. In the past few weeks she's added two babies born in May to her list of historically important figures.

Jones' foray into historical writing came rather naturally, since her husband Alfred, a prominent Alamo realtor, is a descendant of two families whose Alamo lineage dates back to Gold Rush days.

She said the incentive to write her first first book came while searching for old photos at the Jones family ranch.

Although she did much of her research by combing through other books and official records, she acquired the bulk of her information through personal interviews, many with persons well into their 70s and 80s.

This is a difficult and time consuming task, Jones acknowledged, but she says she prefers working with live persons rather than foraging through colorless documents. "Discrepancies arise, however, with memories and recollections," she explained. "So I have to choose which ones appear to be the most accurate."

Besides her books, the vivacious grandmother is known for her columns which appeared for years in local newspapers.

"Because our area is growing and changing so quickly, I want people to know how it began, how it was, and how it is."

As for the possibility of a third book, Jones just slyly smiles and says noncommitally, "Anything's possible. Someday I may even tell my age."

Alamo writer Virgie Jones spent many hours combing through files to compile information for upcoming book on San Ramon Valley.

New water mix for EBMUD

OAKLAND — By Labor Day weekend, customers of the East Bay Municipal Utility District (EBMUD) should be receiving a mixture of stored Mokelumne River water and Middle River water.

But they may notice only a little stronger chlorine taste, according to EBMUD officials.

Starting Sept. 1, Central Valley Project water will be siphoned from the Middle River through a $1,948,000 EBMUD pumping plant which only six months ago was just an idea. The amount of water pumped through will build up to a rate of 79 million gallons a day.

Aided by the Walnut Creek Pumping Plant at the East Bay end of Mokelumne Aqueduct Number Two, the pumps will deliver the supplemental water supply to filter plants and reservoirs where it will mix with the higher quality water EBMUD customers are used to.

As it travels along the aqueduct to the East Bay, the Middle River water will be chlorinated at a newly-installed chlorination facility. As it reaches filter plants, it will receive an activation carbon treatment to eliminate taste and odor problems and remove organic chemicals.

"Walnut Creek Filter Plant will be the first to start treating the supplemental water from the Middle River," said C.R. Hitchcock, president of the EBMUD board. "But within days every plant will have it. We will distribute the water as equally as possible."

Hitchcock noted that the Middle River water will insure that the district can hold enough higher-quality water in storage to carry through, even if there is yet another dry year.

"There is no need for concern by people on low-sodium diets," Hitchcock added. "The Middle River water has higher chloride levels than our usual supply, but it will be thoroughly diluted with almost salt-free Mokelumne water."

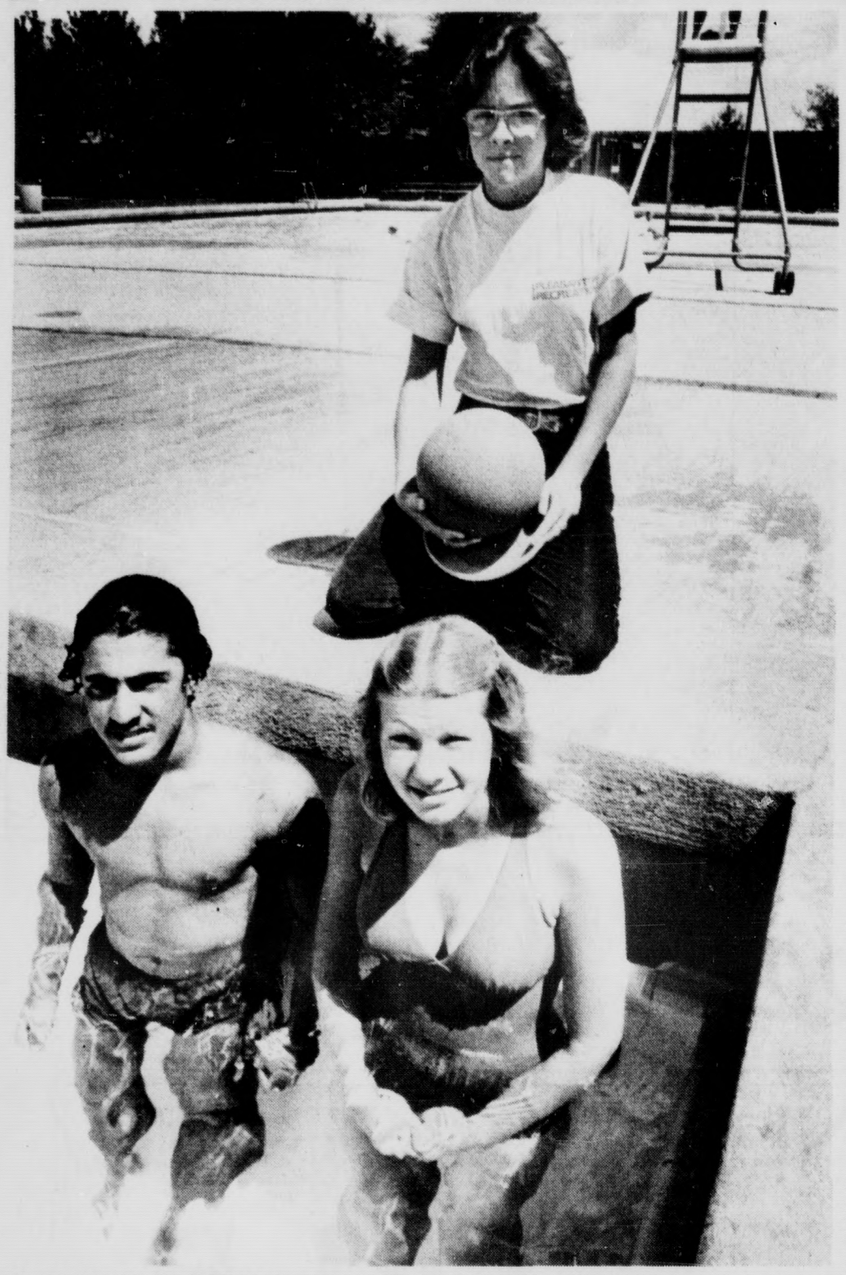
Kids donate 3,000 hours to city



Swimming aides Rick Bota and Carrie Halbrook and playground assistant Leisa Thomas

PLEASANTON — Thirty-six teens volunteered some 3,000 hours to the city's Aquatic Center and playground programs this year, reports coordinator Dolores Bengston.

"Their service to the community assures the success of the programs," she says.

Playground aides are usually students who at one time participated in the program and enjoyed the activity offered, Bengston adds. Aides attend staff training meetings and assist playground leaders.

"Many aides are specialists in either crafts or sports, and reinforce the staff in their specialty area," says Bengston.

Playground aides for 1977 were Gail Coensgen, Bill and John Demian, Mary Diller, Tami Goen, Steve Goudreau, Tami Habbestad, Marion Hagler, Dan King, Laurie Morley, Brian O'Keefe, Steve Raymond, Mary Beth Ross, Kevin Reidy, Leisa Thomas, David and Steve Woodward.

Water safety aides must be at least 14-years-old, and be certified as Red Cross Lifesavers and Instructor Aides.

They work in the learn-to-swim program helping water safety instructors at all levels of swimming lessons.

With their help, the class instructor and aide to student ratio is kept at one to four, according to Bengston.

This year's water safety aides are Andy and Rick Bota, Sue Callon, Tom Goudreau, Marianne Griswold, Carrie Halbrook, Gretchen Harri, Dave Helsel, Bob Johnston, Jenny Lawson, Anne Maxson, Debbie Murray, Terry Purtell, Craig Silcox, Shawn Valhstrom, Jeff Yssels, Julie Waldron, Bobbie Todaro and Renee Yandell.

Anti-Coors pickets to greet Raider fans

OAKLAND — Pickets will greet Oakland Raider fans when they stream into the Coliseum Saturday night for the game against San Diego.

Dick Groulx, secretary of the Central Labor Council, told The Times the pickets will be informational only, asking customers to refrain from buying Coors beer, which the Raiders are selling in the stands this season for the first time.

The labor organization has joined civil rights groups in calling for a boycott of the Colorado beer because of alleged racial discrimination in hiring practices and supposed anti - labor policies. The firm has denied the charges with extensive comments in The Times.

Elderly get tax extension

The deadline for senior citizen renters and homeowners to file tax rebate forms has been extended until Sept. 30.

Previously the deadline was Aug. 31, but many seniors have not been filing the forms and an alarmed State Franchise Tax Board decided to extend the deadline, if people have a good reason for missing the Aug. 31 deadline.

Many seniors reportedly didn't know the program existed, since this is its first year, and others confused it with the renter's credit on their income tax form.

Anyone eligible for the program can simply attach a note to their forms stating the reason why it was not submitted earlier, according to Assembly Member Tom Bates of Berkeley, who addressed a press release to the topic.

Not knowing about the program is sufficient reason for asking for the extension to Sept. 30, said Bates.

Forms are available from his office, 3923 Grand Ave., Oakland, or by writing to the Franchise Tax Board, P.O. Box 1468, Sacramento, Calif., 95807.

To qualify for a renter's relief, a person must have been 62 or older as of Jan. 1, 1977, a California resident on or before that date, must have occupied a rented residence between July 1, 1976, and June 30, 1977, and must not have had more than $5,000 household income for the calendar year. Senior renters who receive welfare benefits are eligible. The renter's assistance is in addition to the renter's credit allowed by the state on personal income taxes.

More senior homeowners will be eligible for property tax assistance and for larger amounts this year because of changes in the law.

The amount of income household income still eligible for assistance has been raised from $10,000 to $12,000 a year. The amount of refund now will be based on the first $8,500 of assessed value of the home, not on the first $7,500 as last year. The Franchise Tax Board said these changes could raise the average refund from $176 to $220.

To qualify for the property tax assistance, a person must be 62 or older as of Jan. 1, 1977, be a resident of California as of Jan. 1, 1977, own and occupy their own home between July 1, 1976, and June 30, 1977, and have a household income of not more than $12,000 for the calendar year of 1976.

Senior homeowners may be eligible for this assistance even if the they claim the veteran's property tax exemption or the homeowner's property tax exemption.

STAR GUIDE

If you're an astrology buff, you won't want to start your day without consulting the "Astrograph" by Bernice Bede Osol. It's in the stars.

REMEMBER

We, Zane & May in the beginning of this holy event of matrimony, have very carefully considered what is required to create a happy and lasting marriage. In this marriage we vow: to give one another an atmosphere in which each can grow and having a mutual sense of values and common objectives, to often speak words of appreciation and demonstrate gratitude in very thoughtful ways, to remember to say, "I Love You" at least once each day and never become too old to hold hands. As we stand together facing the world and forming a circle of love that gathers in the entire family, we shall have the capacity to forgive and forget and never go to sleep angry - this together with our search for the good and beautiful and the realization that it is not only marrying the right person, it is being the right partner. Each day will be a new day forever. These vows we make to one another as we begin our walk through this wonderland of love and life together as man and wife.

Thank You
for loving me —

New focus on careers in school

SACRAMENTO — Many school districts in the state have made "giant strides" in career education, according to a new report published by the state Department of Education.

"California got in on the ground floor in career education," in 1971, the report says. "In the years that followed, school districts in the state have come up with a variety of innovative efforts in career education."

Although career education projects in state schools are using many different approaches, they are trying to accomplish the same thing: To teach students about the world of work and to help them prepare to become part of that world, the report says.

Unlike vocational education, career education is designed to be woven into all existing courses offered by a school. For example, a teacher presenting a unit on Mark Twain might incorporate a study of Twain's occupations, and an English teacher could help students see the need for English by relating it to journalism, communications and stenography.

Career education can transfer "traditional subject matter into relevant, motivating experiences for students," the report says. It can show students how the skills they learn in the classroom can be applied to real life settings.

The report — "Implementing Career Education: Exemplary Practices in California Public Schools" — spotlights successful career education practices in school districts, colleges and county education offices around the state.

For instance, elementary school students in Ceres Unified School District role play real life situations by creating a mythical city called Reality Land. In this mini-city, students act as employers, employes and consumers. They elect a city council and formulate laws.

Students earn money, in the form of scrip, for performing work and have to pay taxes, buy goods and services, and even borrow money — with interest — if they come up short.

Ceres teachers say Reality Land teaches students how government and business operate, gives them practice in becoming competenet consumers and helps them learn how to make decisions.

Reality Land has a sister city in the Ontario - Montclair Elementary School District called Simutown. It concentrates on banking, civil organization and business operation.

In Los Angeles, school officials thought their students should be able to show a prospective employer something more than an "A" on a report card. They took 60 occupations not normally taught in schools and set "levels of mastery" for each.

When a student completes a program of in-class and on-the-job instruction, he or she receives a certificate of competency, signed by a professional in that field.

The Los Angeles Unified School District also uses a Business and Exchange Program which makes it possible for teachers and counselors to spend time in local businesses and, in the process, pick up information on trends and opportunities in the working world.

School officials there believe that teachers and counselors involved in career education must stay in touch with the working world to be effective.

A multitude of other ideas are used around the state.

In Santa Barbara, career counselors put together "occupational preparation sheets" on specific careers. These sheets tell students everything from what's involved in a job to suggested high school courses that would be helpful in getting a job.

In Chaffey Union High School District, students don't just build houses, they design, decorate, landscape, market and finally sell them.

In San Diego, Project CHOICE (Children Have Options In Career Education) gives teachers 130 "learning units" developed by other teachers. The units suggest activities that will help students from prekindergarten to 12th grade to broaden their understanding of the world of work and to make career decisions.

Nearly all career education efforts have one thing in common: a career center.

And "almost every high school in California has a career center," according to the report.

A career center is a special place where a student can go for career information, testing, counseling and placement.

But unlike the counselor's office of old, where students had to sit and wait for help, the career center is like a supermarket — where students can help themselves to all the information they need.

Nationally, career education is beginning to have a visible impact on schools across the country, the report says. In California, too, it is being recognized as a vital force for change and reform in education.

Many of the exemplary practices described in the report were developed by the department in cooperation with the Industry - Education Council of California, and organization designed to promote closer collaboration between the state's business and education communities.

Copies of the 64-page report are available for 65-cents, plus 4-cents sales tax in Bay Area Rapid Transit District counties, from the California State Department of Education, Publications Sales, P. O. Box 271, Sacramento, Calif., 95802.

VCSD candidates

Brown rides his experience

Robert I. Brown, San Ramon resident for 14 years, is an engineer.

He said his business experience which has involved planning, engineering and constructing subdivision and planned communities would provide valuable background for dealing with related problems within the Valley Community Serivices District (VCSD).

A list of his accomplishments include being an Application Engineer from 1947 to 1954 for Westinghouse Electric Corporation in their Air Condition Division. He stated he was responsible for the sale and application of field assembled air-conditioning equipment in Los Angeles and Southern California.

From 1954 to 1962 he was Development Engineer for Volk-McLain Communities. He was responsible for planning, engineering and construction of subdivisions and planned communities in Los Angeles, Orange, San Bernardino, San Diego, Alameda and Contra Costa Counties.

From 1962 to 1965, Brown said he was President of Country Club Homes, Inc. and developed 55 acres in the State of Hawaii. He also managed a general contracting business.

During 1966 and 1967 he was Project Manager for Leslie Salt Company at Redwood Shores, Redwood City, Ca. In that position he was responsible for planning, engineering, architecture and construction.

From 1967-1971, Brown stated he was Vice President and General Manager for San Ramon Village Company. He was responsible for planning, engineering, construction and sales of the San Ramon-Dublin properties purchased from Volk-McLain Communities, Incorporated.

From 1972 until now, Brown has been President and sole proprietor of R.I. Brown Company engaged in developing San Ramon Industrial Park in Dublin, California.

As far as the issues pertaining to Dublin's incorporation, and the pipeline, Brown said there were a lot of questions he would like to have answered concerning both before he reached any decisions.

Joe Covello

Incorporate, says Covello

Joseph Covello, San Ramon, has been Chairman of the Valley Community Services District Citizens' Advisory Committee (VCSD) (CAC) for four years.

"My capacity with the Citizen's Advisory Committee has allowed me to obtain a knowledge of VCSD activities, procedures, and policies that provides me with an insight into the District that can only be an asset if I am elected as a Director," Covello stated.

Covello said his further goals would be to involve citizens and the community more actively in their local government.

"It is not easy for the public to relate to government but at the VCSD level it is possible and all of us should take advantage of it."

He said he also hoped to be able to influence the VCSD board to make the District's financing and budgeting procedures more evident.

"I'd like to do this so that a public hearing on the District's budget each Spring is not a mystery to the public and there can be more awareness of what the District's tax revenues truly provide and where the surpluses or deficits really are. There are better to do it than is being done now, and I have several ideas on this aspect."

Covello is a graduate engineer, has had career activities in engineering, consultation, the construction of major engineering projects and related business and management activities.

Although he is not a Dublin resident, Covello said he was generally in favor of incorporation for Dublin.

"I think it would afford the community better police protection for one thing. For another, I think an incorporated area has an advantage in dealing with the county."

He added that on the surface he did not see any problems in meshing incorporation with VCSD services.

On the pipeline issue, Covello stated, "I am not totally familiar with every aspect but I have a general feeling that things like water reclamation or strategically located reservoirs would serve disposal problems better than pumping waste water into the Bay. I'm not sure what LAVWMA is doing now. I find the pipeline issue as confusing as anybody else."

Covello suggested it might be time to start thinking about a third fire station in the San Ramon area since that area is growing so fast.

Wishy water

Just what we needed! — a big personality flap involving the three voting members of LAVWMA and the Zone 7 board of directors over who gets credit for that state - financed reclamation study.

When the cities of Livermore and Pleasanton and the Valley Community Services District — acting as the LivermoreAmador Valley Water Management Agency — won state funding for Phase I reclamation studies, all of us had rare occasion to rejoice. And to agree, for whether we like the idea of that Super Pipeline or we don't, we are all agreed that recycling of treated waters must be considered somewhere in this basin's future.

LAVWMA took the initiative, and got the state grant. Zone 7 was invited to join in that application, but failed to respond to that first invite. Now Zone 7 wants in "as a full partner" and a sub committee of LAVWMA agrees to those terms.

But not Mayor Helen Tirsell, and not VCSD's Lila Euler. "Why let Zone 7 in at this late date?" they seem to be saying. To which the people must reply, "Why not?"

What we need in these troubled waters is action — concerted, forthright, representing the best interests of this basin. There are enough enemies out there in regionland without looking for foes across the back fence.

Granted, Zone 7 seems to have trouble deciding what it wants to be, or even who it should serve. Had that board taken any leadership five years ago, there needn't be a LAVWMA today. Given our druthers, we would have just one "Valley Water Agency" to import, wholesale and discharge all the waters used by these three urban areas; and Zone 7 seems the logical heir to that throne.

Right now we need representatives who will talk to each other, so that we can all begin to talk sense. Let Zone 7 into your private club, LAVWMA, and let the rest of us have a little peace.

Watered down

The battle being waged over the Peripheral Canal seems one of little interest to the southern extremes of Contra Costa County and all of Alameda County. But history teaches us that water taken from any spot in northern California is water lost to all of these 24 counties.

When Governor Edmund "Pat" Brown pushed the California Aqueduct some 25 years ago, most of us agreed with his "plenty to go around" philosophy. Time, and two years of drought, have changed our thinking.

Now Governor "Jerry" Brown is pressing for agreement on the Peripheral Canal, again with southern California as a major area of benefit. Hindsight teaches us we should not be burned twice, not when it's our land that is drying up, our crops suffering, our industry being shut down.

The water Pat Brown sent south via his billion dollar aqueduct became the catalyst for southern California growth that brought catastrophic air pollution. Even as those fresh supplies of imported water were arriving, there was talk in Los Angeles of "reducing the population to a more tolerable level,."

Now that we are no longer a state of water abundance (and many question that we ever were) the struggle is one of "crops versus homes" and even "jobs versus lawns." Today, 85 percent of California's available water supply is used in agriculture. We are the nation's, and in many crops the world's, foremost producer of food.

Just within this one state there is 25 percent of all the irrigated land in the United States; and 75 percent of that water originates north of Sacramento. The rainfall is in the north; the voters are in the south.

This is the same political equation which has dominated California's "water politics" for half a century. We should keep that in mind, as Jerry Brown tries to send water to where the votes are.

Selling a home

Last Sunday's Times carried detailed information as prepared by Bank of America (and released to all California newspapers) relative to questions faced by those who are about to sell, or to purchase, a home. While of a "consumer interest" nature, the B of A report still lent heavy emphasis to "selection of a good agent" in pursuit of that transaction.

Because the B of A report also suggested areas where the home owner, or potential buyer, might also work for their own cause — talking to friends, checking out recent homes sales in that neighborhood, etc. — at least one real estate broker took exception to that entire report.

"You are misleading your readers," this broker claimed, and, "you are cutting the throats of the same real estate people who advertise in your newspaper."

Taking those comments one at a time: The Times believes an informed citizenry is always desired ... for their own good, and for the benefit of the commercial sector. Our knowledge of many things, including the home we own or seek, has improved considerably in recent years. Without such knowledge, many of us would never aspire to home ownership; we might never even have the courage to talk to a real estate agent.

This "little bit of knowledge" in no way suggests that we are capable of bypassing experienced, professional help. The real estate agents in our communities are reputable, they are experienced and, because most of them hope to remain in business here for many years, they are certain to provide their clients with the best possible sales' contract.

The Times carries that kind of "real estate information" too, Sunday after Sunday. We feel it is that total, balanced coverage which best serves our readers, and our advertisers.

But will it wash?

Oak Knoll Hospital

Editor, The Times:

I was a patient at Oaknoll Hospital for 3 months and I never had such good care, nor as pleasant people.

I have cancer, and am now taking chemo therapy. The Drs. nurses, and aids were all delightful, kind and very conscious concerning their jobs.

Human error could take place in any hospital and I wish they would compare all hospitals with Oaknoll.

They have to be conscious people to receive the pay they do compared to civilian Drs.

It seems to me channel 4 and the news media is looking for a good story at the expense of hard working, loving people at Oaknoll.

Banned guns

Editor, The Times:

The effort by the National Coalition to Ban Handguns (NCBH) has to be one of the great witch hunts of our day. I suspect that it's appeal is in the suggestion that violence is rooted in objects rather than people. The issue is indeed an emotional one, and almost entirely so for NCBH. They neglect to tell us the actual magnitude of the dangers they see. To put it in focus, more people choke to death on food every year than are killed in home firearms accidents. The NCBH solution to this "terrible problem" is to commit almost a half billion dollars worth of vandalism against private property and let the victims pay the costs.

The second amendment indicates their proposals are illegal. They would have us believe the "militia" mentioned therein refers to standing armies. This is a case of twisting history. When the amendment was written, all guns in the country were privately owned and the founding father abhorred standing armies as the tool of tyrants. The militia of that day was every able bodied man.

VCSD views buses

Editor, The Times:

Valley Community Services District now has no legal authority to provide transportation services. To overcome this the Board voted unanimously in February of this year to seek State legislation to add this vital service to the functions we now perform.

The attorney prepared the legislation and we have requested our Assemblyman to carry this through the State process. Following this action I sent letters to homeowners groups, the C[illegible]mber, the League of Women Voters, and the cities in the valley asking for their support and/or thoughts and suggestions on this subject.

As a member of the Congress of Valley Agencies and their liaison to the Valley Transportation Committee, I successfully recommended to COVA that it's staff time be provided to this committee so that they could proceed with their work. I attended the Board of Supervisors meeting and spoke in favor of the county providing funds for a citizen survey of special transportation needs. The county provided half the funds and the cities have provided the other half.

When the survey is complete it will be used to substantiate a valley-wide request for Federal funds for local transportation. 24 is my hope that by that time V.C.S.D. transportation legislation will be in effect and we can participate. Answers to questions in the valley-wide survey and the VCSD master plan review survey will help guide the decision as to the exact form of our participation in the provision of this vital service.

Let's hear it for garbage

Just when everyone was inclined to turn up the community nose at garbage, along comes this PG&E plan to "develop natural gas supplies by drilling wells into the Mountain View sanitary land fill."

Turns out the years of depositing solid waste on the fringe of Mountain View, followed by two decades of decomposition, has left a source of natural gas which PG&E can no longer ignore. The utility company is calling that landfill gas "a valuable supplement."

All of which raises the possibility of the Altamont Pass becoming a major new source of natural gas after the East Bay's garbage is deposited there, over the next several decades. And what might have the depleted gravel pits done for our energy shortage had we allowed all Bay Area collectors to convert the heart of this basin into "the world's largest garbage dump"?

Next thing you know, some genius will find a way to capture the sewer plant aroma, convert the stuff into electricity. As the world's traditional resources are depleted, and mankind looks for new ways to sustain our lifestyle, it is amazing what we won't come up with ... including gold in them thar garbage dumps.

round the town

"The dog is showing her age these days."

It is an observation made often, in the heat of summer, as animals begin to wilt. People too, I have noted.

"I doubt if we'll have her through another winter," the lady of the house observes. Her concern for the family Dachshund is touching. It has begun to touch yet another longtime member of the family.

"I think it's just the heat, and everything," is my scientific conclusion. "Comes the fall and she'll be as lively as ever."

It is a prediction made more of hope, than of confidence. For both of us. Dachshund and me. I long ago observed that we are advancing through the years together. Our infirmities seem to be marching right in step, too.

Nothing is guaranteed forever. The warranty is running out. Man and beast. And other things.

"I think we need a new iron," she announces. No preamble. No careful lead - in about how she's labored lone and hard these many summers. A new iron, just like that.

"We've had the old one for over 20 years ... so I guess it was due to go." She is like all American housewives. Trapped by the free enterprise creed. Use it, throw it away, buy another. Keeps the economy moving. Keeps most of us in hock, for life.

"I thought it was just the cord, or something," I observe, judiciously. Men are supposed to know about these things. Not enough to repair anything; just enough to know when to call in the experts.

"We've already had the cord repaired, couple of times," she announces. "I'm getting worried the whole thing might blow up .It's over 20 years old."

A male of that vintage is rated in the prime of life. Two score years and he's just reaching his full stride. "The best sex is after 40." I think I read that somewhere; I hope I did.

"The toaster isn't exactly up to par either," I declare, poking a fork in search of a burned piece of bread. "Didn't we just buy this thing? Seems to me the new appliances don't last near as long as the old things."

Observe here how cleverly I argue in favor of the old, without ever mentioning the iron. It is a knack which penny - pinching husbands gain only after years of experience. Us old dogs learn a thing or three, as we advance through the marital forest.

Dachshund never married. Wasn't her decision so much as it was ours. The "we know what's best for her" rationale. There have been days, when I see her moping around the yard, I wonder if we made the right move. A female companion might have made life for Dachshund more tolerable, particularly in these later years. But then ...

I should probably go out and buy a new iron and a new toaster today," my female companion announces. Startled me. I had thought we had ended that dalliance into things appliance. Why must she persist so?

"I could learn to live with that toaster for another year or two, I think." My approach, again, is circumspect. If male is willing to put up with stupid toaster, then can female be less tolerant of iron? I have seized the initiative. And she knows it.

"It's just that I'm afraid the iron will catch fire, or something, if I leave it alone for a minute. After all, the thing is 20 years old, or more.

Dachshund is 17. Plus. That's better than four score years, in human terms. When I get there, if ever, I figure to have aches and pains you wouldn't believe. Can't imagine anyone putting up with me, myself included.

"She wouldn't follow me down the front steps this morning, to get the paper. She's never done that before." The woman seems determined to write off our octogenarian friend. The other day she asked, "Would you consider getting another dog, if we lose this one?"

I was shocked, believe you me. Never gave a thought to parting company with our old friend. Seventeen summers, and more, we have advanced together. In wit and in wisdom, as the poet says. She's had her ailments, that's for sure. But no more than any other senior citizen. No more than me.

"I really wish you would stop talking about Dachshund as though she was already gone," I announce, firmly. "It's making me very nervous."

She sees my point. Hasn't mentioned the dog's ailments in days. And this morning I caught her loading the old iron into the car. "Thought I'd see if that fixit shop in Livermore could repair the cord, once more," she explained.

Her words perked me right up, for some strange reason. Never felt better. Dachshund has been looking a lot more spry, too.

Tax bite

Expect to hear much more about tax "indexing" in the days to come. The term has come into use to define provisions which permit automatic adjustments in taxation to offset the effects of inflation.

Geared to cost of living or some other similar price index, it permits downward adjustment of income tax rates, as earnings rise due to inflation, without the necessity of changing the tax laws. Had it been adopted by California a couple of years back the state would not now have the enormous surpluses which are bulging the treasury and straining the imaginations of the politicians in finding ways to spend it.

That indexing hasn't been seriously considered by Congress is chiefly because the federal government doesn't have surpluses, continually operating on deficit spending, and also because the Congress has no trepidations about changing income tax rates from year to year.

But state legislators are not all that anxious to tamper with tax rates. They don't like to raise taxes and once they have taken what to them is a monumental step in doing so they are even more reluctant to reduce them. Thus, in the face of soaring inflation the state is constantly between the throes of near bankruptcy and overabundance, depending upon the lapse between tax rate increases.

The theory of indexing is that it will keep the level of the tax bite on earnings constant regardless of inflation. Under the present system thousands of taxpayers get thrown into a higher state income tax bracket when wages are increased to meet rising living costs. In such situations the breadwinner learns to his dismay that a salary raise has actually resulted in a lower take home paycheck.

Not only will the indexing, in theory, maintain the level of the tax bite but it also will provide a constancy in government spending, permitting the state to continue the same level of services as prices rise. Still it will avoid the windfall surpluses and thus prevent spending sprees which can only result ultimately in even higher taxes.

While some proposals for income tax indexing have been made in connection with the property tax reform measures currently before the Legislature, the time apparently has not arrived for their adoption.

Whatever the reasons they are not the same as met by Assemblyman Vic Fazio's effort to apply indexing to the state's gasoline tax. Seeing the need for more funds for highway maintenance, Fazio sought to provide them by changing the state's per gallon tax on gas to a rate to rise with the consumer's retail price index. His bill, AB 1415, got bogged down in an Assembly committee. Fazio is now considering amending it to gear it to a construction price index. He said he thought that would be more appropriate and mor acceptable to the industries involved.

He may be right as far as those who would benefit directly from the state having more money for highway construction and maintenance but spokesmen for the oil industry say they would still oppose the indexing concept. Not, they explain, that they would necessarily oppose a reasonable gas tax increase if it is necessary. But they prefer keeping the tax on a per gallon basis. That, they say, is because the accounting problems caused by price differentials throughout the state would be tremendous if the tax were indexed.

Dr. Joyce Brothers

DEAR DR. BROTHERS: There is one policeman in our town that my 17 - year - old son swears is deliberately trying to trap him. We thought he was exaggerating until last week. Our son was accused of being with a group of boys who robbed a supermarket. This policeman came to our house and was very rude and aggressive even though we told him our son had been with us that evening. He claimed we were lying and was insulting. My husband and I would never lie to protect our son because we don't believe this helps a child. We were angry and incensed. We've hired a lawyer but it's our word against the policeman's and we're getting frightened and suspicious of him. — O.M.

DEAR O.M.: All policemen are not what we might wish them to be, but the important thing to remember and to impress upon your son is that the police force is made up of separate individuals. They have trememdous pressures and some buckle and become angry and bitter. Some are probably aggressive to begin with and perhaps shouldn't even be on the force, but we must always guard against the tendency to generalize because of the behavior of one individual cop.

In situations such as you describe, it's difficult to keep one's perspective, but your letter suggests that you're handling this in a reasonable manner. I'm sure this error will be cleared up and if you can keep your judgment and see this police officer as one man who is illsuited for his job among many who are trving to be fair, your son will have a better chance adjusting to the situation.

DEAR DR. BROTHERS: My husband makes me very angry because when I discipline the children or ask them to do something they don't want to, he enters into a kind of conspiracy with them against me. This is supposed to be funny, but I can't help feeling hurt. I am also irritated because my husband refuses to do any disciplining and forces me to take all the responsibility for this unpleasant task. The kids can't help but think he's a great guy and I'm an ogre. I don't like this role. — V.A.

Dear V.A.: You have described a situation that's unhealthy for your children, you and your husband. He has to recognize that what your family needs is a man who's willing to take on the responsibilities of being a full - fledged father, not one who's trying to be one of the kids.

Your children have pals their own age at school and a father should not try to play that role. A child needs and wants authoritative protection against his own impulses. He wants guidance, and consistency, as well as love, and he can't receive this from an adult who refuses to grow up himself.

The good father isn't afraid to discipline with love when necessary, and he will never side with the children against his wife. Playing the adult role isn't easy but it pays off. The man who says "let Mother do it" will eventually lose the respect of his children as well as his wife.

DICK ROGERS

If you fall and bump your knee or receive a sharp blow, you might get a painful bump called a bruise.

When you bruise yourself, tiny blood vessels deep inside the skin break. The blood from the broken blood vessels seeps into the tissue around the injury, which becomes swollen and painful.

The bruise is red for a while, but it may soon start to turn black and blue. The black-and-blue color is caused by the discoloration of the blood trapped in the injury.

In a few days the black-and-blue mark changes to greenish-yellow as the trapped blood is absorbed gradually by the body.

Finally, the mark disappears altogether.

A "black eye" is caused by broken blood vessels, too Often, an ice pack or a cold, wet cloth applied to the injured area can lessen the swelling and discoloration of a bruise.

Severe bruises should be treated by a doctor.

DEAR DR. LAMB — My husband has inner ear problems. The doctor has diagnosed it as Meniere's disease. He is on Antivert and Hygroton.

We would like to know if the medicine he is taking would have any effect on him because we would like to have another baby. Does this medicine have any effect on the sperm?

DEAR READER — That is a good question. There is surprisingly little information on the effects of various medicines on men as potential fathers. There is quite a bit more information on women. There is nothing to indicate either medicine would have any adverse effect in this regard on your husband.

Antivert should NOT be used by a woman who is pregnant or who may become pregnant. It has been shown to cause birth defects in pregnant rats. Several of the antihistamines such as Antivert that are used to prevent motion sickness or dizziness should not be used in these women. The changes, if any, would occur during the development process and there are no studies that implicate the use of such medications in men as a factor in birth defects.

DEAR DR. LAMB — My husband has congestive heart failure due to a leaky valve. He is under the care of an excellent physician who has him on a low sodium diet and medicines.

Occasionally he becomes short of breath due to overexertion. Would you please explain what takes place to him physically when this happens?

DEAR READER — Normally the left side of the heart fails first. The leaky valve you speak of is no doubt in the left side of his heart.

When the heart is called upon to work harder than it can it fails to pump enough blood through the left side of the heart and the blood backs up in the lungs.

The excess blood in the lungs causes fluid to leak out of the small blood vessels into the tiny air sacs of the lungs. As the air sacs fill with fluid the lungs are no longer efficient in exchanging air. The person becomes breathless. Sometimes this is almost like an asthmatic response giving rise to the medical term, "cardiac asthma."

By Oswald & James Jacoby

South was so proud of his good spade suit that he overlooked his tremendous diamond support and merely bid four spades.

Of course, North must take some of the blame for missing the easy diamond slam. He didn't rebid in notrump.

Still, four spades with a hundred honors is not a really bad result, but South compounded his crime and found a way to go down after West gave him a chance to misplay the hand.

East won the first trick with the jack of clubs and continued by cashing the ace and leading a third club. South ruffed with the jack and West didn't bother to overruff. He simply chucked his one diamond. Now South got greedy. He decided to go after an overtrick and led a diamond towards dummy. West ruffed and led a heart.

South was in dummy and was faced with a problem. Should he finesse in trumps? Real thought would have told him not to. If East held three trumps his distribution would have been 3-1-3-6 and West would have been dealt eight hearts, but South wasn't used to real thought. He took the trump finesse and had managed to collect only nine tricks.

PG&E's plea to open a 'nuke' plant

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Claiming the drought has left electrical supplies critically low, Pacific Gas & Electric asked the U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission Thursday for an interim operating license for the first unit of its Diablo Canyon Nuclear Power Plant.

The two-unit plant, 12 miles from San Luis Obispo near an earthquake fault, has been stalled pending the outcome of studies on seismic safety.

"If drought conditions of the past two years continue," the utility wrote the NRC, "capacity margins next year would be less than six per cent of the peak load during the critical months of July and August. Without Unit 1, those margins would vanish."

Even with normal rainfall, PG&E said, the margin of electrical reserves next August would be less than nine per cent, "well below the level required for reliable service."

The offshore Hosgri earthquake fault is three miles from the plant.

PG&E claims the NRC has asked the utility to consider earthquakes of a higher magnitidue than PG&E consultants say the fault is capable of producing.

The utility first asked for operating licenses for Diablo Canyon in 1973.

The first unit is complete and is capable of producing as much electricity as the utility's 64 hydroelectric plants produced this year, PG&E said.

The NRC has said a full-term operating license could not be expected until next summer but an interim license request could be processed by the end of the year.

The second unit at Diablo Canyon is 90 percent complete.

White House may speed up licensing

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration, striving to improve the United States' ability to meet its energy needs without outside help, is considering speeding up the licensing of nuclear power plants.

The newly created Department of Energy has formulated a "Nuclear Regulatory Reform Act of 1977," which would shorten dramatically the length of time it takes for the government to approve licenses for nuclear plants.

The legislation, under consideration by Energy Secretary James R. Schlesinger, would depart from the present caseby-case licensing of individual sites for custom - designed plants. The new approach would involve the advance designation of approved locations for plants or multiple - facility "nuclear parks" even before the construction of specific plants is proposed.

A draft of the proposed legislation, circulated to state governors and to the nuclear industry, was made available Wednesday to The Associated Press.

A spokesman in Schlesinger's office said comments on the draft have been requested by Aug. 29. The draft version may be modified in the light of these comments before any final version is submitted to Congress next month, he said.

A similar proposal to hasten the licensing process for nuclear power plants has been offered by Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., chairman of the Senate Energy Committee. The concept appears to have considerable support in Congress.

Because of concerns over safety and environmental effects, the construction and operation of nuclear power plants and fuel processing facilities has been more closely regulated than other energy - producing facilites.

While it may take five to seven years from the first proposal to the completion of a coal-fired electric generating plant, nuclear plants have been taking eight to 10 years for completion.

A large part of the extra time has been due to the federal licensing process managed by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission.

A nuclear power plant now requires public hearings and the issuance of an NRC permit for construction, and then must go through a similar process before it can obtain a license to start operating.

Schlesinger's draft bill, aimed at circumventing government red tape, includes authority to approve suitable locations for nuclear facilities in advance of applications for specific construction permits.

Administration law: balance your own budget

WASHINGTON (AP) — Now there is a new adage to go with the old one that says it's tough to get a loan unless you can prove that you don't need money all that badly.

The new one is that the less money you've got, the more serious it is to overdraw your checking account.

At least that seems to have been the White House rule in the cases of two aides to President Carter — who now acknowledges that he has overdrawn a check or two himself.

One of them, Greg Schneiders, was dropped from consideration for a top White House post because of a shaky financial record that included bad checks and unpaid debts, although almost all of them were settled before he came to prominence as Carter's righthand man during the campaign.

The other is Budget Director Bert Lance, who Carter has defended vehemently and dramatically against criticism stemming from his banking transactions, personal loans and overdraft checks.

The latter item is, of course, a familiar problem. It would be hard to find anyone with a checking account who has not inadvertently overdrawn it once in a while. An unbalanced checkbook is situation comedy stuff.

"... Obviously it's better not to write overdrafts," the President said in his latest defense of Lance. "I can't deny that I have written overdrafts from my own bank account on occasion, and so has my wife, not deliberately, but because of an error..."

Carter isn't alone, even among presidents. Gerald R. Ford said he'd never had an overdraft, but he did acknowledge writing personal checks in excess of the sum in his account. "I think a few people in this country have written checks and then waited until the end of the month and then mailed them," he said.

It all sounds familiar to household money managers trying to stay ahead of the bills. But the sums involved in the Lance overdrafts at the Calhoun, Ga., First National Bank were anything but ordinary. Government banking investigators reported that at times during the fall of 1974 and the winter of 1975, Lance family overdrafts reached the neighborhood of $450,000.

Samaritan sect now numbers only 470

TEL AVIV AP — The descendants of the Good Samaritan of the Bible are down to only 470 persons who maintain the sect's rites and traditions.

They consist of four families, the Danfi's, Cohens, Marchivs and Tsedakas, half living in a run-down Tel Aviv suburb called Holon, and the others in Nablus, near Mount Gerizim, the Samaritan holy site where Joshua blessed his people.

Although Nablus is in occupied Jordan, the Samaritans have been allowed, in the 10 years since the Six Day War, to pass between the Formerly separated Samaritan communities to meet, marry and beget with those of their own sect.

Benjamin Tsedaka, who runs a bi-weekly Samaritan newspaper, and is a 125th generation descendant of Manasseh, says the good Samaritan story never did the sect any good. He says the Byzantine Christians during the fifth and sixth centuries pressured them to become Christians, and the sect was destroyed. Later the pressure was on the few left to convert to Islam.

"More died," says the journalist-historian, "It is not a story that builds your trust in anything."

At the time of Jesus the Samaritans, descendants of the tribe of Judah, and described by the chief Rabbi in Jeruselum as a "branch of the Jewish people" was a community equal to that of the Jews.

They differed from the Jews in matters of law and religion. Tsedaka maintains that Jesus' fondness for the Samaritans stemmed from those differences, in that Jesus shared them.

And Samaritans gave their assistance to Jesus in Samaria. "But Jesus' disciples didn't understand the situation, thinking he wanted us to be Christians. We wanted to remain ourselves, and they turned against us." said Tsedaka.

The Samaritan sect is based on the belief in one God and in the prophet Moses, but they differ from Jewish belief in considering Holy writ to be composed of the first five books of Moses only, excluding Talmudic law. And Mount Gerizim is their central holy place, rather than Jerusalem.

Locals reach finals of net tourney

Players from Livermore and Pleasanton continued to play with poise as the Pleasanton Tennis Club's Novice Tournament completed its semi-final rounds yesterday at Amador Valley High School in Pleasanton.

The finals in all age groups are scheduled for today at the Amador courts, and the Valley will be well represented.

The Boys 18's final will pit Vallejo's upstart Aaron Thornton against either Ron Lapp of Pleasanton or Modesto's Dave Earle. Thornton knocked off David Bettancourt 6-0, 6-0 in the semi-finals, while Lapp topped Jeff MacKanic of Livermore in the quarterfinals 7-6, 6-4 and faced Earle, a 6-2, 6-0 winner over David Beals of Pacific Grove, late yesterday for the right to meet Thornton.

The match is slated for 1:00.

The Boys 16's final, scheduled for a 10:30 start, will have San Jose's Marc Dorsa going up against either Ray Nunez of Fremont or San Francisco's Peter Torrez.

In the Boys 14's, Livermore's Todd Madrid won a pair of matches on the day to advance to the finals against tough Gary Dillabough of Burlingame, who beat Livermore's Frances Neri and Rob Baggot of Lafayette yesterday. Madrid lost just one set to Fresno's John Schutt in the quarterfinals before beating out Lino Neri of Livermore, 6-0 7-6 (5-4) in the semi-final match.

The finals are scheduled for 9:15 this morning.

The Boys 12's will see Pleasanton's Matt Duffy square off agains Andy Adamski of Walnut Creek for the title at 1:00. UNLV pinpointed

Tarkanian does it again: probation

KANSAS CITY — The University of Nevada, Las Vegas, has been placed on probation for two years by the National Collegiate Athletic Association as a result of violations in the school's intercollegiate basketball program which the NCAA says occurred during the period from 1971 to 1975.

The action was taken after the NCAA Council considered an appeal by the university on Aug. 22. The council refused the appeal and upheld its findings of violations and penalties previously determined by the NCAA Committee on Infractions. That committee had held a series of extensive hearings on the case.

The NCAA released its statement Thursday evening.

The two-year probation includes sanctions which will prohibit the university's intercollegiate basketball team from participating in any post-season competition during the 1977-78 and 1978-79 academic years, the NCAA said. It also restricts the team from appearing on any NCAA-controlled television program during the probationary period.

In addition, the university will be permitted to award only three new athletically-related grants in aid in basketball each year during the 1978-79 and 1979-80 academic years.

In accordance with provisions of the NCAA enforcement program the univesity must also take appropriate disciplinary and corrective actions against individuals directly involved in the case. As a result, a former head basketball coach, a former assistant basketball coach, the present head basketball coach, Jerry Tarkanian, and eight representatives of the university's athletic interests will be disciplined by the school.

The infractions committee or the council will determine whether the school's disciplinary and corrective action is sufficient. If not, additonal penalties could be imposed.

The UNLV Runnin' Rebels took third place last spring in the NCAA tournament and were fourth in the final Associated Press poll of the year. Tarkanian has won more than 100 games in four seasons there; he went 31-3 last year.

The investigation into the team's activities was the most publicized in NCAA history. Traditionally, the NCAA keeps a tight lid on such probes, but the investigation of the Rebels' program has been known for over a year. And in Las Vegas, the investigation has been known about by some for four years.

Officials at UNLV were meeting late Thursday night on the probation and were unavailable for comment. University officials, however, have scheduled a news conference for 10:30 a.m. Friday.

In its report on the probation, the NCAA lists 18 association bylaws which it says were violated or at least were questionable practices. Some of the bylaws noted contain as many as six separate instances where each rule was violated.

Included among the numerous violations cited are charges that former head basketball coach, John Bayer, current basketball coach Tarkanian and eight representatives of the university's athletic interest were, at one time or another, involved in promising prospective players free dental care, free airplane trips to the games and lodging in Las Vegas for their parents, free automobiles, and offering players illegal cash allowances.

Bayer, Tarkanian and the eight university representatives were not mentioned specifically by name in the violation summary issued by the NCAA national office at Kansas City.

In one case cited, the NCAA says in the 1970-71 academic year the then head basketball coach (Bayer) arranged for four prospective players to be provided the correct answers to questions contained on a preenrollment test before the test was administered.

Further, the NCAA says, "These arrangements were made to insure that each young man achieved a high enough score on the test to qualify for athletically-related financial assistance, for practice and for play during ... the academic year."

The NCAA's committee chairman, Arthur R. Reynolds, said the case involved more than 26 hours of hearings with the university conducted over a fourday period. Two of those days were in the fall of 1976, and one was in March of this year.

He added that the committee members spent many hours reviewing the material submitted to determine whether rules had been violated, and to settle on what penalty to impose.

"The committee was particularly concerned by the involvement of the university's head basketball coach in encouraging certain principals in the case to provide incorrect information related to violations of NCAA regulations," Reynolds said.

"The committee believes this is a serious case, in which a disregard for the association's governing legislation is demonstrated by certain past and present basketball coaching staff members and athletic representatives," he added.

Orantes added to tournament

SAN FRANCISCO — Tennis promoter Barry MacKay has added Manuel Orantes but scratched defending champion Roscoe Tanner from the entry list for the $125,000 tournament scheduled here Sept. 24-Oct. 2.

"The field is shaping up as one of the most outstanding we've ever had," MacKay said Thursday.

Orantes, the Spainard whose achievements include singles titles in the Spanish, Italian and U.S. Opens, will be making his first appearance in a San Francisco area tournament.

Tanner has withdrawn because of a schedule conflict and a television commitment, said MacKay.

Players previously entered in the event at the Cow Palace include Raul Ramirez, Dick Stockton, Arthur Ashe, Brian Gottfried and John McEnroe.

This year's event, with a first-prize of $20,000 in singles, will be sponsored by the Transamerica Corp.

Leads HOF classic

Snead breaks out of slump

PINEHURST, N. C. — J.C. Snead, bothered and bewildered by a slump so severe he was considering quitting the game, snapped back at adversity with a brilliant, eight - under - par 63 that staked him to the first-round lead Thursday in the $250,000 Hall of Fame Golf Classic.

Snead, a nephew of legendary Sam, one-putted eight holes in a row at one stretch as he came within a single shot of the record on the famed, 7,007-yard No. 2 course at the Pinehurst Country Club.

The round was, he said, the first really encouraging thing that has happened to him all season; a season so poor he's seriously considered quitting the tour.

He had to have it to take the lead in some of the lowest scoring ever produced on the No.2 course.

Leonard Thompson was only one stroke back with a 64.

Hale Irwin and Lon Hinkle followed at 65. Mike Morley shot 66. The group at 67 included Al Geiberger, Charles Coody, Miller Barber, Homero Blancas and George Burns.

Defending champion Ray Floyd was five strokes back with a 68. British Open and Masters champion Tom Watson had a 70 and Arnold Palmer matched par 71 in the mild, hazy, almost windless weather.

Bobby Locke, a 60 - year - old who was inducted into the Hall of Fame Tuesday night, had an 83 in his first round in the United States since the 1956 U.S. Open.

"I'm striking the ball quite well, just a bit more frequently than I used to," Locke said.

Montefusco leads Giant win, 4-2

ST. LOUIS — John Montefusco scattered eight hits through six innings and drove in the winning run, giving the San Francisco Giants a 4-2 victory over St. Louis Thursday night while the Cardinals' Lou Brock moved within one of the all-time stolen base record.

Brock had two stolen bases, two hits and scored both St. Louis runs. The steals, his 25th and 26th of the season, left him only one shy of the all-time major league career record of 892 stolen bases, held by Ty Cobb.

Montefusco, with relief help from Gary Lavelle and Randy Moffitt, got the victory.

The home runs by Clark and Elliott were their 12th and sixth, respectively, of the year.

Brock, after executing his two steals, grounded out in the fourth and hit into an inningending double play while batting in the seventh against Lavelle.

A Busch Stadium crowd of 15,841 watched Brock steal two bases in a game for the 128th time in his career. He beat rookie catcher Alexander's throw by a comfortable margin for his first theft and swiped his second base after beating out an infield hit in the third.

Templeton also stole a base for the Cardinals, but both he and Mike Tyson were thrown out by Alexander during subsequent attempts. — by Associated Press

Raiders try Chargers Saturday

OAKLAND — The Oakland Raiders take on American Football Conference Western Division competition for the first time this pre-season when they host the improved San Diego Chargers at the Coliseum tomorrow evening at 6 p.m.

The game will be the first meeting between the clubs since 1969, with the Chargers holding a 7-4 edge in the summer series. However, in games for the money, the Raiders lead 21-11-2, going back to the old American Football League days.

San Diego carries a 2-1 exhibition record into the game, including a 29-17 win over the New York Giants last week, in which the Chargers gained 333 yards total offense. Earlier, the Chargers had beaten the San Francisco 49ers, 32-13, after losing to Dallas, 34-14 in their opener.

Charger coach Tommy Prothro is trying to put together a big play attack labeled, "Watch Lightning Strike" by San Diego's PR crew.

Quarterback James Harris, acquired from the Los Angeles Rams during the off-season, is at the helm of the new offense. The National Conference passing champion in 1976 with 57.6 per cent completions for 1460 yards and eight touchdowns, Harris has hit on 27 of 46 pre-season pass attempts for 326 yards and three TDs.

Rookie Cliff Olander, a fifth round draft choice from New Mexico State, has hit 50 per cent of his exhibition passes and is also expected to see action against the world champs.

Harris' long ball passing is complemented by speed and quickness at the wide receiver spots. Charlie Joiner, a college team mate of Harris' and Grambling, caught 50 passes last season for 1056 yards and an average of 21.1 yards per catch.

Only two NFL receivers, the Raiders' Cliff Branch and Baltimore's Roger Carr, gained more yards.

Joiner has again been leading San Diego's receiving corps with nine grabs for 143 markers and one trip into the royal soil, a 45-yarder in the battle with the Giants. The Chargers' other starting receiver is 1972 Heisman Trophy Winner Johnny Rodgers, from Nebraska by way of the Canadian Football League.

San Diego's number one pick in 1973, the self-styled Johnny R Superstar rang up nearly 8000 yards of all-purpose running in four seasons with the Montreal Alouettes.

With San Diego, Rodgers has already dashed 68 yards to cross the alumni stripe against the 'Pokes while tight end Pat Curran has gathered in 78 passes over the past two campaigns to rank second among the loops tight ends.

Don Woods, Rickey Young , Joe Washington and Bo Matthews are the top running backs for the Chargers. Woods, a 1000-yard rusher in 1974, is the leading ball carrier for San Diego during the Suntan League season with 119 yards.

Young, called San Diego's best all-around performer by some observers, was one of only three players last season to rank in the top ten of his conference in both receiving and rushing. The other pair were Baltimore's Lydell Mitchell and Minnesota's Chuck Foreman.

Washington, the Chargers first selection in the 1976 college talent lottery, averaged more than six yards per carry at Oklahoma but was on the shelf last season due to injuries. This summer, he broke a punt return 89 yards for a touchdown against the 49ers.

The San Diego offensive line is led by tackle Russ Washington, a two-time Pro Bowl performer, and left guard Doug Wilkerson, Charger lineman of the year the past three seasons. Both were first round draft choices after finishing college.

Left tackle is Billy Shields, Ralph Perretta is at center and Don Macek, the 31st player snatched up in the 1976 edition of the draft opens at right guard.

On defense, San Diego has an aggressive front four in rangy Leroy Jones at left end, Louis Kelcher at left tackle, Gary Johnson at right tackle and Fred Dean at right end. Kelcher, Johnson and Dean are all in their third NFL season while Jones has three years in the Canadian League in addition to last years Charger season.

The starting linebackers are expected to be Woodrow Lowe, Tom Graham and Don Goode, all starters in 1976. Goode, a first round draft choice in 1974 who set a club record with six pass receptions last season, picked off one and returned it 34 yards for the game-clinching touchdown against the Giants a week ago.

The San Diego secondary will consist of Mike Williams , a first round draft pick and World Football League veteran Hal Stingert on the corners with Mike Fuller at strong safety and California grad Clarence Duren, acquired in a trade with St. Louis at free safety.

The Raiders, of course, are 1-2 in pre-season after a 12-10 loss to the surprisingly undefeated Seattle Seahawks a week ago Thursday. Previously, the Raiders had mauled the Houston Oilers, 40-0, and been beaten in the final minutes by Chicago, 20-13.

Oakland is exppected to open on offense with Ken Stabler at quarterback. The NFL's passing leader last season, Stabler has completed 19 of 30 passes in the three pre-season games for 248 yards and two touchdowns.

Back-up Mike Rae has completed 19 of 37 for 210 yards and a touchdown. Running backs expected to see action are Mark van Eeghen, Clarence Davis, Carl Garrett, Pete Banaszak and rookies Ted McKnight and Terry Robiskie.

'Niners hobble to Houston

REDWOOD CITY — Starting defensive tackle Jimmy Webb is expected to miss the San Francisco 49ers' exhibition game at Houston Monday night because of a sprained back.

Another 49er injured in last Sunday's National Football League exhibition victory over Los Angeles, cornerback Tony Leonard, received a leg bruise that makes him a doubtful starter.

Three running backs suffered minor leg injuries against the Rams but are expected to be available against Houston. Delvin Williams received a sprained ankle; Wilbur Jackson a bruised a knee, and Paul Hofer, the second-string back who rushed for 43 yards in seven tries incurred a leg injury late in the game.

Wide receiver Terry Beasley should be ready to play Monday, Coach Ken Meyer said. Beasley played briefly in the first game, then sprained an ankle in practice and missed the next two games.

Quarterback Scott Bull probably will sit out his third straight exhibition game to rest an ailing back.

It was reported Wednesday that wide receiver Terry Lindsey left camp, leaving 58 players on the National Football League team's roster.

Networks consider more night football

NEW YORK — The possibility of Thursday night and, perhaps, Sunday night football appears more and more likely as the National Football League's talks with the three networks continue.

The NFL's TV contracts with NBC, CBS and ABC all run out at the close of this season. The current talks are centering on four-year contracts to cover the 1978-81 seasons. It is probable that NBC will again end up with a basic American Conference package, CBS with a National Conference package and ABC with its Monday night games.

Sources say, however, that this time around the NFL is offering a fourth package to include about a half dozen Thursday and possibly Sunday night games. And to sweeten the pot, the NFL is reportedly offering rights to the first and fourth Super Bowls in the four-year deal to whomever accepts the Thursday night package.

In other words, whichever network accepts the risks involved in televising football against prime time programming on Thursday and-or Sunday nights, and also agrees to the added expense, also gets two of the four Super Bowls currently being negotiated.

Sources say that CBS, currently running third in the ratings game, is definitely interested in the fourth package. NBC is interested in Thursday nights but wary of Sunday nights. ABC, which has the strongest prime time schedule, may be reluctant to give up some of its entertainment programming for another night of football. At the same time, however, ABC has been coveting the Super Bowl for some time, and may find the lure of getting two of them too much to resist.

It may not be charitable to offer such speculation but it seems a remarkable coincidence that, at a time when NBC's contract with the Soviet Union for TV rights to the 1980 Summer Olympics is due to come under Congressional scrutiny, the network executives most reponsible for the deal have both been replaced.

Carl Lindemann Jr. left as vice president of sports a few months ago and now Bob Howard has been replaced as president of NBC-TV. Lindemann and Howard were the prime movers for NBC in the Olympic deal. If Congress should find some cause for concern in the contract and call NBC on the carpet, the network can now point out that "those responsible are no longer with us." Very convenient.

NBC, using the growing popularity of boxing as a weapon, scheduled a blockbuster fourfight show for Sept. 14 to run smack against ABC's special two-hour premier of "Charlie's Angels," its hit female detective show. The "Night with the Heavyweights" features top contenders Ken Norton and Jimmy Young in separate bouts.

Couch new Granada A.D.

Don Couch was named athletic director at Granada High earlier this week, making it the second time in his career he will act as A.D. and head football coach at a high school.

Couch, who came over to Granada from Livermore High in 1974, carried the dual role for the older Livermore school in 1965 — ten years after initially beginning work there. Hew was head football coach for 13 of the years before stepping down in 1969 for Tom Davis.

Couch was counselor and junior varsity soccer coach at Livermore before he left for Granada to rebuild the football program, up to that point a mediocre sport at the school.

Since then, he has guided the Mats to a 23-7 overall record, including an undefeated East Bay Athletic League championship and second place finish in the North Coast Section 4-A championships in 1975. Last year, the Mats tied with Livermore for the EBAL crown.

At Livermore, Couch guided the Cowboys to four EBAL titles.

Couch filled the spot left vacant by Hal Sinclair, who became Dean Boys at Livermore High earlier this month. That position became available after Tom Davis left it for an A.D. post at Dublin High.

DETROIT LIONS — Waived Kevin McClain, defensive back.

GREEN BAY PACKERS — Waived Gerald Tinker, wide receiver and Larron Jackson, guard.

Volonte retires from post

Amador Valley High swimming coach Chuck Volonte, a powerful figure in the East Bay Athletic League the past 18 years, has retired from his post.

Volonte's swim teams at Amador High have long dominated the sport since his term there.

Over the past 12 years, Amador has compiled a 59-3-1 mark, including ten EBAL championships and a seven-year undefeated string of dual meets from 1966 to 1972.

At the moment, the Dons have an undefeated winning string of 25 meets going.

Volonte's successor will be named shortly by principal Paul Laird.

Burnham, T-V hot

WOODLAND — Brad Burnham rapped a triple and two singles and Tri-Valley scored five runs in the fourth inning to post a 8-5 win over Davis in the Woodland Winter Baseball League action last night at Clark Field.

After David opened the contest with four runs off starter Rick Rosenbach in the first inning, Tri-Valley hurlers Rick Keizer and Mark Davis each pitched three innings to keep them in check with only one run. Keizer was the winning pitcher.

Brian Swailes added two singles for the winners, while Mark Davis doubled and Wes Karch singled and sacrificed twice to pace an 11-hit winning attack.

Jason Vohz homered and Ken Arpola singled and doubled for Davis.

In the fourth, Tri-Valley opened the inning with a Swailes single, and Bill Beardsley reached via an error to set the stage for an RBI single by Burnham.

Davis then plated both runnners with a two-run double, while Keizer later added a two-run single to complete the rally.

Tri-Valley is now 2-1 in Woodland action. Their next game is Sunday at 4:00 against A & W from Woodland.

Western Little League of El Cajon earned the pther berth in Saturday's championship game with a 6-3 victory over Rotterdam, N.Y. Juan Moreno stroked a two-run single and Andy Hall slammed a solo home run and pitched an inning of sterling relief to key the win.

A spa for horses

An attendant leads horse out of swimming pool at Art Unger's health spa for race horses. Tired out races are pampered, massaged and groomed into condition. They spend about 20 minutes a day in the pool to help circulation in the legs.

Like Father, unlike son

Peter Haughton was just 16 the first time he ever beat his well-known father in a harness race and he was 19 when he edged Bill Haughton in a $100,000 classic at Montreal.

"The first time was at a county fair in Troy, Pa., and dad, who was just checking out an untested filly, seemed quite pleased with me," young Peter recalls. "But in that $100,000 race, he had one of the best mares in the business, Handle With Care, and when I edged him out he looked as if he was in a state of shock.

"You see, that was taking money out of the old man's pocket."

Yanking money out of his father's pocket has become more than a rarity for the 22-year-old offspring, now challenging the nation's top harness racing driver for honors and gold.

"There's a chance this year that we will become the first father and son combination to win more than $1 million each in prize money," Peter said. "The big showdown is coming up in the Triple Crown races, starting with the $250,000 Yonkers Trot Saturday."

Peter will driving Cold Comfort and his father will be handling a trotter named Green Speed in the first of the Triple Crown series which also includes the historic $270,000 Hambletonian Sept. 3 and the Kentucky Futurity at Lexington Oct. 7.

They will drive the same standardbreds in the Hambletonian but, with Green Speed ineligible, the father probably will shift to Hay Good, at Lexington.

The Kentucky Futurity is the only Triple Crown prize which has escaped the elder Haughton, who has won two Hambletonians and three Yonkers in a remarkable career that has seen him pile up more than 4,000 driving victories with prize money amounting to $24.5 million.

For this glaring gap in his 29-year racing career, he can blame his son, Peter.

"Dad was going for the Triple Crown with Steve Lobell," the younger Haughton related. "I had a pacer named Quick Pay. It was a very satisfying win for me but a disappointment, I'm sure, for dad. He hates to lose — even to me. That's what makes him great."

The sports world has produced various father and son combinations, the most notable perhaps being the hockey playing Howes (papa Gordie and sons Mark and Marty, now with New England) but none where competition can be as close and as fierce as in the Haughton family.

Peter, a slim, tow-haired replica of his leathery dad, insists that he never was driven into harness racing. He chose the profession through exposure and immediate love.

"Dad insisted I go to college," he said. "He never twisted my arm. He never upbraided me for a bad race — and, heaven knows, I've had my share — and he never tried to alibi when I was lucky enough to beat him.

"In our personal rivalry, I suppose we have had a dozen races against each other and about broken even. I have won six in which the stakes were $100,000 or higher."

State fair racing

Mile record equalled

SACRAMENTO — Tommy Burkes, the one-time apprentice sensation from Pleasanton, continued to provide his share of the excitement on horse racing's fair circuit at the California State Fair yesterday.

Aboard Craig's Lad, an animal he has ridden to victory before, Burkes piloted the three-year old son of Dumpty Humpty to a track record-tying win in the one mile tenth race. Craig's Lad toured the distance in 1:36 to equal the mark shared by Gaucho Star and Pre Trial, paying $4.40 to win. In the featured $11,250-added Camelia Stakes, Gallant Outlook, ridden by Enrique Munoz, led from wire-to-wire to capture the fourth renewal of the young classic before 7672 fans.

Carrying 118 pounds in the mile and one-sixteenth event, the three-year old daughter of Gallant Man registered her first stakes victory. A beaten favorite in her last outing at Bay Meadows, Gallant Outlook won by four lengths, running the distance in 1:44.

Challenged briefly by Joy For Jama and Ick Dancer, she pulled away on the far turned and was never seriously menaced by Ami's Image, who finished second under Raul Caballero. Foxxy Flyer, ridden by Dale Long, was third, a half-length behind Ami's Image.

Favored Look Quick finished fourth as Gallant Outlook paid $8, $4.40 and $4 while earning $6750 for her owners.

In today's Northern California Thoroughbred Association Sales Stakes, Natural Joe seeks his third stakes victory in a row, opposing five rivals.

Fresh from wins in the Mid Peninsula Stakes at Bay Meadows and the Redwood Empire Stakes at Santa Rosa, the two-year old son of National appears an odds-on favorite.

Carrying 123 pounds — most of it Amador Valley High School alum Burkes — Natural Joe could stay ahead all the way in the six furlong dash against Shezs A Lady, Dance The Polka, Butterfly Pie, Victorious Dream and Two Ton Bargain.

Extra quiet in new AMC Concord

SOUTHFIELD, Mich., — Special attention to the suspension and acoustics provides an extra quiet, ultra smooth ride in the new luxury compact AMC Concord.

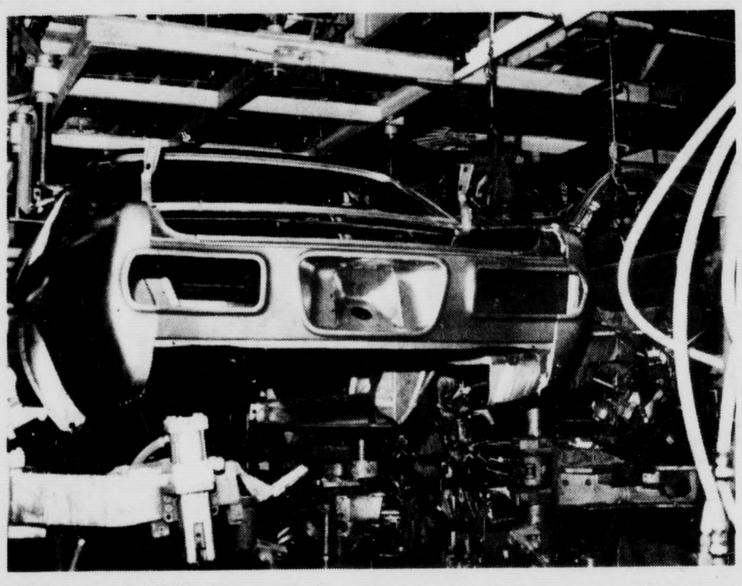
Thomas J. Walsh, vice president-product engineering for American Motors, said numerous things were done to develop a virtually noiseless, boulevard type ride for 1978 Concord sedans, hatchbacks and station wagons. Acoustical and ride objectives were achieved while engineering for exceptional handling and durability characteristics, he said.

Special engineering effort was concentrated on front and rear suspension mountings, and the rear axle isolated from the axle spring seats through the use of rubber blocks. Front wheel rates are approximately 10 per cent lower, and a front roll stabilizer bar was made standard for optimum smoothness of ride and superior handling behavior.

Inside, special insulation is used for the dash and front floor, and sound-deadening coating applied to areas where plastic components join together, contributing to the Concord's exceptional quietness.

For the luxuriously appointed Concord D/L models, molded acoutical fiberglass headliners, rear floor and trunk or cargo area insulation padding, and absorption pads behind all interior trim panels provide additional soundproofing.

Concords also benefit from engineering advances common to all AMC cars for 1978, including the addition of dowel-fits bolts in connecting rod assemblies for superior tolerance control and reduced engine mechanical noise; a reinforced and strenghtened six-cylinder exhaust manifold for long life and reduced manifold 'rattle,' and an improved exhaust system which assures a positively aligned assembly with the pipe welded to the muffler inlet.



Production of 1978 Concords is underway in Wisconsin, and Ontario, Canada.

Tips on night driving

The Service and Parts Sales Division of Chrysler Corporation has compiled the following list of thirteen safety precautions for women driving at night. These travel tips also apply to men as well as women motorists, and to daytime as well as after dark trips.

Always lock your doors, both when you're away from your car and driving.

Travel with your fuel tank at least half full so that you won't run out of gas.

Park under a light in a shopping center parking area or on the street.

Approach your car from an angle which allows you to check underneath it for waiting assailants.

Check the inside car before unlocking the door. Someone with a passkey may have gained entrance and be waiting for you.

Tell someone at home your estimated time of arrival so that if you're later than you planned, he or she can check your travel rout and/or alert the authorities.

Plan alternate routes in case of traffic or weather tie-up. Drive these routes during daylight if possible so that your alternate rout won't be in unfamiliar neighborhoods.

Drive in the center lane when possible, avoiding the outside or shoulder lanes where trouble can occur more easily.

Listen to your radio (or CB) for traffic conditions.

Use your flashers at the first sign of trouble, even while you're still driving in the traffic lanes.

Carry handkerchief, flashers, or some means to alert traffic you're disabled and learn to raise the hood of your vehicle to signal trouble.

Remain in your car with your windows closed until a wrecker, police car, or other safety vehicle approaches to help.

Keep your car properly maintained and in good running condition. Check the fluid levels (gasoline, transmission and break fluids, engine oil, wiper fluid, and water in battery frequently. Make sure your windshield blades and headlights work properly, the heating and defrosting systems are operating to keep the windows clear, and the tires have enough tread to provide traction on slippery surfaces.

Changes for two Chevy favorites

The superwagon Suburban and the sporty Blazer combine new design features with an even sharper appearance in 1978 for traveling comfort and driving versatility.

A key design change for the 1978 Blazer is a lowered rear floor area in front of the seat that gives it more rear seat leg room. The lowered front portion of the rear floor makes it the same level as the front compartment floor. As an added feature, a removable folding rear seat is offered as an option on the Blazer.

In addition, both the Suburban and the Blazer, like other Chevrolet light-duty models for 1978, present distinctive new exterior and interior trim and improved corrosion protection.

The new exterior on the two models includes a new black insert color for available bright metal moldings, a new bright molding on the hood rear edge, a new optional wheel opening molding, re-styled Rally and Styled wheels, and interior refinements including a new instrument panel appearance, new seat trims and new door trim for the top-of-the-line models.

As an added convenience in the Blazer, power front door locks and windows are offered. Also, a highback bucket driver seat is standard and available as an option on the passenger side for the Blazer.

The Blazer and the Suburban have numerous minor refinements for 1978 that add up to motoring and hauling benefits. Among these are a rear door drip gutter added to the Suburban and proved corrosion protection.

Further anti-corrosion steps taken for 1978 include galvanized steel for the radiator grille lower filler panel and side door glass run channels and pre-coated steel for Blazer side outer panels and the tailgate used with the soft top.

The 15-inch Rally wheels, including matching spare, feature new bright center hubs, while the Styled wheels now include bright center hub. A new 4x4 insert is featured for rear hubs of 4-wheel drive models.

The most popular item of equipment on the Blazer is its full-time four-wheel drive with special interaxle differential that allows the system to remain in four-wheel drive both on and off the road. (Full-time four-wheel drive is standard equipment when teamed with the optional automatic transmission on Blazer K10 models.)

The engine lineup for Suburbans and Blazers is continued from 1977. The 4.1-litre six-cylinder is base engine for half-ton two-wheel drive models, except K10 Suburban and except in California. The 5-litre V8 is standard engine for the two-wheel drive C20 (three-quarter ton) Suburban and all four-wheel drive Suburbans, except in California. Optional power plants are three other V8s ... of 5.7, 6.6 and 7.4 litres displacement.

The 5.7-litre V8 is the required engine for California on C10 and K10 Blazers and Suburbans.

Since the Suburban is increasingly popular as a towing and traveling vehicle, a long list of recreational vehicle optional equipment is again available for 1978. These include deadweight trailer hitch, weight-distributing hitch platform, 31 - and 40-gallon gasoline tanks, transmission oil cooler, heavy-duty shock absorbers, generator and battery, comfortilt steering wheel, power steering, below eye level mirrors and luggage rack.

The new and the traditional in '78 from AMC cars

SOUTHFIELD, Mich., — AMC cars for 1978 are crafted for the value-conscious buyer with new levels of comfort, convenience and operating economy in all American Motors lines.

The exciting new luxury compact AMC Concord makes its debut as a practical alternative for owners changing from larger, less fuel-efficient cars. Concord offers appointments associated with fine cars together with economies found only in compacts.

AMC's popular Pacer features V-8 power as an option for the first time for 1978, and the fashionable Barcelona Package previously offered as an option only on the Matador coupe becomes available on the Matador sedan as well.

The American Motors lineup for 1978 also includes a specially-equipped AMX sports hatchback for the performance-oriented car enthusiast, and the versatile, fun-to-drive subcompact Gremlin.

All 1978 AMC cars are protected by the company's exclusive Buyer Protection Plan which provides full 12-months or 12,000-mile warranty on everything but tires. Introduced in 1972, BPP is the industry's only full warranty.

The extra values found in the 1978 AMC cars are evidence of American Motors continuing commitment to respond both to the needs of the consumer and the energy-conservation objectives of the nation.

CONCORD

The new luxury compact Concord is fresh evidence of American Motors' responsiveness to the personal transportation needs of an energy-conscious era.

It provides the fresh styling, comfort and convenience that buyers changing from larger, less fuel-efficient cars are unwilling to give up, and at the same time offers the operating economy and fuel savings inherent in compact cars.

For the discriminating buyer who wants the utmost in luxury, an optional Concord D/L package provides a landau vinyl roof for sedans, an opera quarter window for the two-door sedan, woodgrain sides for the station wagon, and such additional features as individual reclining seats, custom headliner and sun visors, a digital clock, color-keyed grille accents and wheel covers, and D78 x 14 white sidewall tires.

But not all the emphasis has been placed on size and luxury. Added attention has been paid to suspension and acoustical characteristics of the Concord to assure the smoothest and most quiet ride possible.

That AMC Concord is offered in four body styles — two and four door sedans, hatchback and station wagon.

Rectangular headlamps and bezels, unique to Concord in AMC's 1978 car lineup, accentuate a bright six-section grille, and bold-tri-colored taillights highlight the rear of the car.

Inside, the Concord has a look of elegance with plush velveteen seats for the two-door and four-door sedans, and soft-feel vinyl seats for the hatchback and station wagon. The instrument panel is richly styled with walnut burl vinyl inserts.

A 232 CID six-cylinder engine with three-speed manual floor-shift transmission is standard on all Concord models. Also standard are front disc brakes, wheel covers, a front sway bar, inside hood release, rocker panel, wheel-lip and drip rail moldings, rear bumper guard and hood ornament.

Optional engines for Concord are the 258 CID six and the 304 CID V-8.

AMX

The 1978 AMX hatchback is a sporty model designed for the youthful, performance-oriented car enthusiast.

It features black fender flares, front air dam and rear window louvers, front and rear painted bumpers with bumper guards and nerfing strips, a brushed aluminum roof band with special signia, dual flat black side mirrors and unique black body side scuff moldings.

Tri-colored tail lamps and blacked out grille, headlight bezels, rear window molding, door and quarter frames, lower back panel, license plate depression and wiper arms also contribute to the sporty character of the AMX.

New soft-feel vinyl bucket seats in a choice of three colors black, blue, or beige; soft-feel sport steering wheel; new brushed aluminum instrument panel overlays; rally instrumentation with tachometer; custom door trim panels, and a console are among the many interior highlights.

The AMX is offered in five exterior colors — Classic Black, Alpine Whitex Firecracker Red, Sunshine Yellow and Quick Silver Metallic. The AMX in Classic Black only has several special features such as a gold decal on the roof band, front doors and fenders, and a golf stripe on black slot-style wheels.

Standard engine-transmission combination for the AMX is a 258 CID six with two-barrel carburetor and four-speed manual floor shift. A floor-mounted automatic transmission, optional with the 258, is required when an optional 304 CID V-8 is ordered.

The popular "Levi's" interior trim package is offered as an option for AMX in blue, black or beige.

PACER

An optional V-8 powerplant will be offered in the AMC Pacer hatchback and station wagon for the first time when 1978 models are introduced. The standard engine for Pacer continues to be the 232 CID six with the 304 CID V-8 joining the 258 CID six as options.

The hood and grille of the Pacer have been redesigned for 1978 to give a fresh, new appearance to the front of the car.

1978 AMC-AMX Hatchback

Occupant comfort and convenience again command major emphasis in the 1978 Pacer with asymmetric doors for easy entry and exit, front seating and legroom equal to most intermediates, and a long liftgate on the wagon which extends down to the bumper height floor for ease of loading and unloading.

Many previously optional Pacer features will be standard for 1978, including the appealing D/L package with individual reclining front seats in new velveteen crush fabric for the hatchback, and a new soft-feel vinyl for the wagon. The individual front seats have been modified to provide added legroom for rear seat passengers.

Other new standard Pacer features include an electric clock, color-keyed wheel covers, custom steering wheel with woodgrain accents, custom door trim panels with assist straps, high-level ventilation system with three upper outlets, rear seat armrests, day/night rear view mirror, and D78 x 14 whitewall tires.

A special optional sport package for the Pacer hatchback includes the 258 CID six-cylinder engine with a four-speed manual floor shift, DR78 x 14 black steel belted radial tires on slot-styled wheels, sport steering wheel, bucket seats in soft-feel vinyl, and individual seats in velveteen crush fabric or reflection print fabric, and a choice of six different two-tone paint treatments.

MATADOR

strument panel ventilation and a new custom steering wheel.

All models also feature a color-keyed, fully carpeted interior, rear bumper guards and rocker panel moldings. Also standard are front disc brakes, two-speed electric windshield wipers which are two inches longer than on 1977 models, electric windshield washers, and a spare tire cover.

Gremlin, which is designed to carry up to four passengers economically and comfortably, offers a wide range of options, including a new digital clock and an AM/CB radio which are new for 1978.

Standard transmission with the 121 CID four-cylinder and 232 CID six-cylinder custom models is a four-speed manual floor-shift, while the six-cylinder base model has a three-speed manual floor-shift as standard.

Now: diesel economy in light trucks

Diesel power is introduced to Chevrolet's light-duty truck line for 1978, bringing with it advantages of greater fuel economy and reduced fuel costs along with other operating benefits.

A new 5.7 litre (350-cubic inch) GM V8 diesel engine is being offered in half-ton (C10) two-wheel drive, two-door Fleetside and Stepside pickups for 1978.

In addition to fuel economy, the new diesel offers the ability to withstand long periods of idling more efficiently. Prospective light -duty diesel markets include fleet users, farm and ranch operators and certain high idle and high mileage commercial applications.

Another key benefit is that the new diesel pickup has low exhaust emissions levels, enabling it to meet federal air pollution standards without a catalytic converter.

The diesel is capable of producing fuel savings of as much as 20 to 25 per cent, versus a gasoline engine of similar power rating. It develops approximately 120 net horsepower at a relatively high 3600 rpm. Bore is 4.06 inches, stroke 3.39 inches and compression ratio is 22-to-1. It is a naturally aspirated, four-cycle engine with the four cycles being similar to those of a gasoline engine. The combustion chamber design includes a combustion prechamber where fuel ignition begins before spreading to the piston area, providing a quieter running, more economical engine with less exhaust smoke than a conventional diesel engine with an open chamber design.

The design also includes glow plugs extending into each pre-chamber. The ignition system activates the glow plugs, and, after a brief wait, the engine can be started. The glow plugs stay activated until the engine reaches normal operating temperature. From that point combustion occurs by the heat of the compressed air.

Since the diesel engine changes many vehicle characteristics, the package of equipment included with it is an engine oil cooler, thermostatic fan drive, dual exhaust system, two 4000-watt heavy-duty batteries which are connected in parallel for starting, a 63-ampere Delcotron alternator, engine block heater, hood and front and rear floor noise insulation, added spray deadener on cowl sides, power brakes, power steering, automatic transmission and a special instrument cluster.

Chevrolet is offering a diesel powered pickup for the first time in 1978

What of sexism in lounges?

OAKLAND — Alameda County supervisors grappled with the meaning of the word "lounge" this week while trying to lobby for greater public use of Veterans' Halls in most county cities.

Supervisor John George of Oakland was concerned that the veterans are restricting the use of the lounge in the Berkeley Veterans Hall to men only.

Supervisor Fred Cooper of Alameda said that all depends on whether the lounge is a restroom or a bar and restaurant combination.

It's the bar type, replied George. Supervisor Joseph Bort of Castro Valley didn't see anything wrong with "old cronies getting together having a drink in an all male bar" or the "ladies getting together on their side."

After resolving the lounge question, the supervisors commended Oakland for a high number of public user days for its Veterans Halls and wondered how they might get other Veterans Halls, paid for by the county and run by veterans' organizations, to do more public rentals. None of the Valley cities is involved in the controversy since they have their own agreements with the Veterans' groups over public use.

Cher's small tattoo at 'base of back'

By Dick Kleiner

DEAR DICK: Is it true that Cher has a tattoo on her behind? If so, what is it of? I heard this somewhere and they said she does. R. ROBBINS, Lodi, Calif.

It's true. (I don't speak from personal knowledge of this area, you understand, but from reports from reliable snoops.) Cher has a tattoo which is located, I'm told, "at the base of her back," which is a euphemism for what you said. And the tattoo is of a butterfly with some musical notes around it. The whole thing is very small. (But, then, so is she.)

DEAR DICK: Recently, I saw the movie, "Carrie." I'd like to know if the guy who played Tommy Ross (William Katt) is planning on making any more movies. He's such a hunk! JILL CRYTZER, Meadville, Pa.

Is a hunk good? I guess so. Anyhow, Katt has just finished shooting another movie, "First Love," in which he appears opposite Susan Dey.

DEAR DICK: Some weeks back, I saw in your article that William Conrad had died very suddenly of a heart attack. Is that true and could it have been THE William Conrad of the Cannon series? BEN JOHNSON, Springfield, Mo.

You've got me mixed up with some other writer, and THE William Conrad mixed up with SOME OTHER William Conrad. Our Conrad, alias Cannon, is entirely alive.

DEAR DICK: Is it true that Robert Goulet and William Conrad (Cannon) are brothers? B. Vogel, Williamsport, Pa.

Not on either their mothers' or fathers' sides.

DEAR DICK: I would like to know if David Cassidy and David Bowie are the same person. If not, who is David Bowie? JOANNA MARIA GRIFFIS, Orangeburg, S.C.

The two Davids are entirely different. Who is David Bowie? A good question. As near as I can figure out, he's a singer, but let's not jump to conclusions. He's also become an actor lately, and was excellent in "The Man Who Fell To Earth."

The young and 'laid-back' in business

PLEASANTON — There was a time not long ago when you had to go to Berkeley to find a snack place with hip decor, stained glass windows, potted ferns and macrame wall hangings.

But thanks to a younger generation of merchants on their first business ventures, the Valley finally is tasting some of the artful surroundings and laid - back atmosphere that got started with the Flower Generation.

For example, there is Aromatica, the little shop on Rose Street, where 24 year old Karene Biedermann and her crew dispense avocado puff sandwiches and genuine herb tea by the cup. Biedermann decided that Pleasanton should have a luncheon place where one can have 20 different coffees and something as rich and special as Kentucky butter rum cake.

More important for her, she decided to go into business, instead of college, figuring she would learn at least as much from the commercial experience. She has.

"I learned you run a business by instinct," said Biedermann. "You can work things out on paper, but they don't always work that way. And I've learned how to get along with all sorts of people."

Her age is young for a business person, but generally that has helped her with others in business who have taken time to help her learn new things. However, a few have taken the attitude that because she is young she can't learn anything out in the real world and she feels that's unfortunate.

She also dislikes competition personally and is sorry when people steroeotype her to the extent they think she must be competitive simply because she is in business.

Perhaps the hippest of this city's younger business people is Jerry Beyer, bearded, bespectacled owner of Penny Lane on the corner of Main and Angela Streets. He knew some heavy underground writers back in the 1960's, thanks to his long service among the Bay Area's big bookstore chains.

Asked whether the beard turns off customers who are used to sales people in double knits, Beyer replied, "When I'm on the street, people call me a hippie. When I'm behind the counter, I'm an intellectual."

Sometimes intellectuals are also missionaries trying to raise the taste of the local community through good books. Will it happen here?

"Outside of an academic community, it's really impossible. Most communities, including this one, like romances and Gothics. That's what I sell most. But there are two things I do. I tell people about good books I have read. And I am making more titles available to my customers — poetry, art books, photography. Not a lot of them, but some good ones."

One area where he definitely wants to raise the local taste, literally, is with his new wine and beer tasting enterprise. He has an ABC license for the rear of his bookstore and has converted the back room to a very quaint caberet with a half dozen tables for winetasting parties. He welcomes clubs to conduct a sociable little winetasting there, though so far only individuals have done it.

Another dream is to convert the room into an old fashioned early 1960's coffee house on Monday nights. That's the night when the Italian restaurant next door is closed and parking should be no problem. He'll serve coffee and apple cider and invite local folksingers in for weekly hoots.

Beyer has not gotten rich in his enterprise —

You run it by instinct

in fact, it's a struggle, but he does enjoy his the independence, something which all young business persons mentioned in our little survey.

Don DeBolt, who started Hacienda Del Sol with partner Sandy McTernan, definitely likes the work better than his old job at a computer firm in Sunnyvale. He is outgoing and well - suited to playing host at a restaurant.

The cafe is located in a restored Victorian house on Main Street near Division Street and DeBolt lives upstairs with his family. Much of the decor was made by the people who worked there, showing the commune spirit of the 1960's lives on.

Bartender Alice Ramos did the macrame wall and plant hangings, DeBolt built the varnished wooden tables, waitresses Julie Pickett and Maria McTernan made the stained glass. And, to add to the local artistry, cocktail waitress Irene Goings sings there on Saturday nights with Jane Stevens.

Another communal effort has been made by the five young men who run the Stony Ridge Winery on Vineyard Avenue. They lease from landowner Southern Pacific and are putting the old Ruby Hill winery back into shape under their name.

They are aiming at a Bay Area market with their products and report good acceptance. They have a tasting room at the winery and were pleased to host 3,000 people July 17 when they had their first annual crafts fair on the grounds. They also are looking ahead to a harvest festival in October, and local people will be invited to that one, too.

All the men grew up in Bay Area suburbs and still take advantage of the cultural things in the big cities, but regard the winery as their home now.

"We've learned quite a bit is involved in agriculture," said partner Len Rosingana. "There's a lot of maintainance you don't realize. It's a full time job and we have seven people here, all living communally. We're one big happy family."

Their nursery wound up in the right place

When Jack and Ruth Williams opened the Alden Lane Nursery 22 years ago their friends told them the corner of Alden Lane and Holmes Street was too far from the center of Livermore to start a business.

Cattle grazed on the hills around them and "Everyone thought we were insane for starting out here in the boondocks," Ruth said.

Today those hills are full of homes needing greenery and the Williams' nursery has grown from one small building to nearly four acres of plants, trees and flowers.

Jack was a long-time Livermore resident and former city councilman when he and Ruth, then a registered nurse, started the nursery in 1955 at the suggestion of an acquaintance, Buck Sharp.

Sharp had been a gardener at the Veterans Administration Hospital and offered his experience as his contribution to the fledgling business.

"He said that with this property and $2,500 we'd have a nursery," "But with $2,500 you couldn't even see anything and so Buck just kept phoning in orders," Ruth laughed.

Six weeks after opening Sharp died of a heart attack and Jack admits now they knew little about the nursery business. He and Ruth worked long hours with "a hose in one hand and a garden book in the other" learning it. Both said they got the most help from Hayward nurseryman George Martin who taught them the shortcuts and even gave them the specifications for their greenhouse.

Today the nursery is a family project with the Williams' daughter Jacquie, a graduate in horticulture from Cal Poly San Luis Obispo, working there full time.

An Elk for 46 years and a Mason, Jack has retired from daily business operations and finds time for a little golf but said, "Don't mention that, it's so bad."
